PROFILES 21

Welcome to the Starter Set scenario for the Marvel Multiverse Role-playing Game! Whether this is your first experience with RPGs or if you're a seasoned veteran of other systems, we're excited to have you aboard!

Here are some quick guidelines to help you get ready for your first adventure.

Learn By Playing

The first Act of the scenario is designed to be run by the Narrator and the players alike to learn the basics of the game. The scenario was written with extra, helpful information at key points to further explain the rules. You'll want to have the Starter Set Rules booklet nearby as well, as it will be an invaluable tool for explaining key concepts.

Hero Selection

Have each player select a hero from the ones included in the Starter Set, but the scenario can be played with any other hero of adequate rank. Each player must choose a different character for the adventure. No two players can play the same hero.

- Black Panther
- Black Widow
- Captain America (Steve Rogers)
- Spider-Man (Miles Morales)
- Storm
- Wolverine (Laura Kinney)

All of the listed heroes can be found in the Starter Set.

That's about it for an introduction. Let's dive into the module itself....

OVERVIEW

The adventure is split into four Acts, to be played in sequence. The adventure pits the players against the mysterious Grandmaster, joined by one of the most iconic villains in the Marvel Universe: Ultron, who appears in two versions (see below).

Act One: From across the Multiverse, the Grandmaster has abducted an assortment of heroes for his Contest of Champions. Right out the gate, the heroes are pitted against robotic drones designed by the Technomancer, the current champion, in an arena fight in a techno-castle adrift amid the stars. The current Technomancer is none other than Ultron, albeit a less powerful copy of the original!

Things quickly get out of hand for the Grandmaster, as the Hulk begins to tear apart the arena and is removed from the contest, but not before exposing an opportunity for the rest of the heroes to escape into the underbelly catacombs. Within these catacombs, the heroes must work swiftly to free another prisoner named Korg and defeat the Technomancer and his robo-minions before the area is completely flooded.

Act Two: The team has weathered the arena. But now they'll need to unite to find their way back home. By locating and soliciting the aid of the mutant Beast, they craft a scheme to escape their current plight. This act is a stealth scenario where the group must avoid raising alarms while working to liberate the captured X-Man.

Act Three: Once Beast is out of his cage, he offers a plan to reverse engineer the Great Portal to send everyone back home by way of his B.R.I.A.D. device – a special device he's secretly cobbled together. It's a good plan, but the team will still have to battle their way out into the scrap-filled skies and the Great Portal beyond. This is a fast-paced act that is used to drain resources rather than provide a deadly threat.

Act Four: Just before the team can reach the wormhole, another, more powerful clone of Ultron, blocks the exit, along with his best troops. It's a desperate fight to the finish as the team faces off against drones, Ultron and Nebula, all while making their escape using Beast's device to back-hop through the Great Portal and make it home. Hulk makes a second appearance to fight alongside the heroes during their bid to escape.

THE GREAT PORTAL OF PLANET HULK

The Grandmaster's Arena is built on Sakaar (A.K.A. Planet Hulk) and has the Great Portal spewing debris from across the universe onto the planet's surface. This wormhole is usually one-way, meaning it cannot be used to navigate elsewhere, and is not designed or controlled by any individual.

ACT ONE

WELCOME TO THE ARENA!

INTRODUCING CHECKS

This first section introduces the core mechanic of the game: action checks!

Action checks are explained on pages 7-9 of the Starter Rules.

Profiles for Ultron and Ultron Drones can be found on pages 21-23 of this book.

The scenario starts with a bang: the heroes are sucked into a dimensional portal! But before that happens, the characters are on their own, busy doing their thing.

This is an excellent moment to let the players introduce their characters.

The Narrator asks the players to briefly describe what their heroes are doing at the time. They could be busy fighting crime, saving the world, or maybe they are simply living their normal life, doing things like commuting or buying groceries.

After every player says what they are doing, show them the Arena Map. Then proceed to read aloud or paraphrase the text below.

Suddenly, a shimmering portal opens in front of you, and, before you can do anything, you are sucked in by a cosmic force!

When you open your eyes again, you immediately realize that you are not on planet Earth anymore.

You are chained to the perimeter wall of a massive castle, which has been constructed on a hunk of rock suspended in space. The castle is fabricated from thick steel with various rooms and courtyards. The open sky above the structure is a vortex of swirling constellations, dizzying to the eye and mind. You are not alone. There are several other people chained up beside you, all heroes like you.

You recognize one of them in particular: Bruce Banner. He is battered, wounded, and angry! He is clearly trying to transform into Hulk.

Shortly after regaining your bearings, a giant-sized, holographic image of a man appears in the sky.

"My name is Grandmaster. I preside over a little harlequinade called the Arena." The hologram chuckles. "And you have been gathered here, rather unwillingly I must say, to be tested against the best the universe has to offer!"

As the grandiose announcement finishes, several uniformly manufactured androids are deposited into the courtyard. "My faithful drones, defend the honor of the arena from those vile usurpers!" The Grandmaster incites the troops.

The drones immediately fire on you with their firearms. It will be an interesting night!

ROLLING THE MARVEL DIE FOR DAMAGE

Several times, this scenario will tell you to take dMarvel points of damage. When this happens, roll only the dMarvel and consider the result to be the damage taken. Count an M as 6 damage.

The heroes hurriedly free themselves from their bonds with a Melee vs. TN 12 action check. If they succeed, they get loose as a free action. If they fail, they break free anyway, but at the cost of a standard action (so they cannot act in the first turn of combat).

However, enterprising characters may find other ingenious and interesting ways of escaping beside just breaking the chains through sheer strength. In this case, just respond as though they passed the check above.

Stepping off the perimeter of the castle is like stepping into the void before being painfully teleported back into the courtyard. Those that do so take dMarvel points of damage to Health as they are ripped apart, atom by atom, and haphazardly reconstituted at the center of the courtyard once more. When this occurs, a hologram of the chuckling Grandmaster appears in the void and wags a finger condescendingly at the combatants below.

TELEPORTATION TECH

The arena comes equipped with the necessary technology to recall heroes that fall off the edge of the space and punish them for their failure. This is controlled remotely by the Grandmaster, but Ultron also has an auxiliary control for this device that he will later use to create havoc for the heroes.

The Ultron Drones

INTRODUCING COMBAT

The goal in this part of the story is to introduce the players to the mechanics of combat using minor NPC combatants with minimal chances of failure. Keep the fight cinematic and interesting, but give the players an opportunity to flex their heroic muscle.

Combat is explained on pages 19-33 of the Starter Rules.

The drones, even if the heroes at this stage don't know it, have been created by Ultron, seemingly aligned with the Grandmaster after ascending through the ranks of the Arena himself. "Technomancer" is the gladiatorial name granted to Ultron by the Grandmaster. In spite of this apparent alliance, Ultron does not play well with others and has other plans beyond the arena. Whatever his true intentions are, though, they are beyond the scope of this adventure.

There are as many enemy Ultron drones as there are heroes, plus 1 additional drone for each Rank 4 hero.

USING TOKENS

One of the best things about tabletop role-playing games is the option to use tokens or 2D-Minis, and Marvel Multiverse is no exception! But, this being the first, introductory combat, we suggest running it in the "theater of the mind" without getting into the details of tactical movement. Just show the map (see next page) to the players and tell them where their heroes and the enemies are positioned.

Anyway, don't worry. You will have plenty of occasion to use the tokens later!

"Hulk Smash!"

Once the fight begins, Bruce Banner becomes desperate as debris and hazards pelt him. He strains against his bonds as his body begins to turn a shade of green. Panic-stricken, he communicates in broken grunts, growls, and short retorts with the heroes and seems largely intent on avoiding the assault. When the heroes defeat the last drone, read the following paragraph.

The drone's last attack zings past you, hitting Bruce Banner in the head. Not good. Not good at all.

The scientist lets out a terrible cry and transforms into the monstrous form of the Incredible Hulk!

"HULK SMASH!" He roars. Then, in an unstoppable rage, he slams the rocky ground and walls with meaty fists, dismantling huge chunks of the structure.

Zooming into view from the other side of the floating space rock's surface, an alien spacecraft begins firing at the Hulk with laser cannons in an attempt to stop the carnage. The Hulk bounds toward the craft and manages to grapple with it, smashing at the fuselage as it dips and sways violently.

The Hulk's impact affects the whole arena, heroes included! All characters make an Agility vs. TN 12 action check. Those that fail take dMarvel points of damage to Health as they are knocked to the ground.

Art by Carlo Pagulayan, Jason Paz & Guru eFX

Ouch! When the dust of Hulk's smash settles, you understand that every cloud has a silver lining. A large fissure has opened in the ground, revealing partially submerged catacombs below. Perhaps it could be an escape route? There is only one way to tell: going in. But you must be quick. The speakers have remained silent since the Hulk's smash, but it won't be long before Grandmaster's goons come to check.

DANGER ZONE

The players should be discouraged from grappling with the ship or the Hulk. If needed, describe how the Hulk flings chunks of the ship in all directions, creating dangerous missiles. The ship won't last much longer before it inevitably explodes, showering its remains on the surface below.

WHEN IT RAINS, IT POURS!

EXPANDING COMBAT & CHECKS

Building off what was presented in the first encounter, this section offers increased opportunities for characters to put their non-combat skills to the test. Additionally, combat challenges are heightened by introducing a much more powerful villain with several powers.

You advance cautiously through the catacombs, but it isn't easy. The earthquake caused by Hulk's smash made everything unsafe. Debris is falling from the ceiling, severed power cables crackle with electricity, and it is dark down here. The sound of gurgling water is heard in the distance. Mind where you put your feet...

Unless the group has a way to make light, for example, with a power or improvising a flashlight, each hero rolls a Vigilance vs. TN 12 action check to avoid dMarvel points of damage to Health from the hazardous environment.

The dark area finally ends with a dimly illuminated room. It's where the gurgling sound originates.

This room must have been an interrogation room of some sort and was severely damaged by the Hulk.

"Hey, is someone there!?" a strained voice says.

A large, stony creature is trapped prone on his back on a torture rack with shimmering energy bindings that keep him restrained.

"Please help me! I have not much time!" the creature implores.

He is right. The area is slowly filling with water flowing from broken pipes. A little bit longer and the stony guy will drown.

"The name is Korg. If you help me out, I can bring you back home!" he says to encourage you.

If the heroes hesitate, the Narrator may choose to cross off one or two boxes on the Time Track (see the next page) before the fights commence.

When the heroes start to help Korg, something unexpected happens.

ENTER THE TECHNOMANCER!

Suddenly, a portal of light appears in the room, and a mechanical humanoid steps from it, followed by a swarm of hover-drones.

"Damn!" Korg curses. "Ultron is already here!"

"That is not my name in this place, prisoner. Here, I am known as the Technomancer, the Master of the Arena! I thought that the disciplining you were administered had made you more respectful of your master. But it is not an issue anymore. I am going to dispose of all of you!"

The swarm of hover-drones zips towards you like angry bees.

Teamwork will be necessary in order to free Korg, defeat the robots, stop the water, and escape the facility!

There are a number of hover-drones (see hover-drones block next page) equal to the heroes, each focusing on a different hero, while Ultron (Act 1) focuses on the sturdiest hero.

SETTING THE SCENE

Take the Interrogation Room map and put it on the table so that every player can see and easily reach it. position the enemy tokens representing the hover-drones in the red squares, leaving the square marked with T for the Technomancer. Then position Korg's token in the blue square marked with a K. At this point, the players can place the token representing their hero in the remaining blue squares.

Tactics

TIME TRACK

There's a ticking clock to rescue Korg. At the beginning of each round of combat, the water level in the room rises by 1 foot. Korg will be underwater after 2 turns, but can hold his breath for an additional 8 turns before he loses consciousness and begins drowning. The Narrator can keep track of the danger by checking the boxes of the Time Track above.

To assist Korg in escaping, a hero needs to beat a Logic vs. TN 12 action check. By doing so, they follow the energy bindings through the broken floor to a terminal and turn off the water flow through an automated bypass. Another option requires a hero to succeed on a Melee vs. TN 16 action check to destroy the power cables powering the bindings. Doing so will cause them to take dMarvel points of Health damage for each attempt as they are scorched by the glimmering energy.

Clever characters may find a way to close off one of the leaking water pipes in order to slow down the surge, thus buying everyone 2 extra turns.

The scene can end in 2 ways: with the heroes freeing Korg or with the water filling the room when the Time Track is filled. Both options are handled in the Aftermath section.

Ultron & Hover-Drones

As the current Arena Champion and partner to the Grandmaster, Ultron is currently motivated to defeat the heroes and secure the arena.

All hover-drones immediately shut down if Ultron is defeated.

Hover-drones

Health	Focus	Initiative
10	-	+1

All Defense Scores: 8
The drones would be included in initiative order, but don't make attacks. The heroes can attack the drones and destroy them, but the drones will not retaliate.
They will use their action to harry an opponent, dealing no damage but adding trouble to the target's next roll.
Hover-drones are immune to Focus damage.

ULTRON'S SECRET

The Technomancer is just one of Ultron's many copies. Defeating him here means nothing in the grand scheme of things. Ultron has other, more powerful forms elsewhere.

THE AFTERMATH

The Heroes Free Korg

The text below supposes the heroes free Korg and that Technomancer is still alive. If the villain has been defeated, change the wording accordingly.

> "Finally!" Korg sighs, rising up.
>
> "Getting free of your bindings won't let you escape your fate!" Technomancer gloats, pointing his weapons at the stony man.
>
> Suddenly, the ceiling over your head shakes again. Hulk must be really angry upstairs. The ceiling collapses over Ultron and his minions!
>
> "Come on. Get away before the tin man gets out of there!" Korg coughs.

Water Fills the Room

The text below supposes the heroes didn't manage to free Korg in time and that Technomancer is still alive. If the villain has been defeated, change the wording accordingly.

> The water is almost over your head now. Korg, underwater, stirs weakly.
>
> Ultron, hovering over you, laughs. "The end of the rats. This is a fitting end for you organics!"
>
> Suddenly, the ceiling over your head shakes again and collapses. The debris breaks a hole in the floor!
>
> The water is sucked away, like a bathtub without a stopper, and you with it!

The water beats the heroes badly while they are drained away. Every Hero takes dMarvel x 2 points of Health damage.

In addition, Act 3 will begin with 2 boxes of the Alarm Track already checked (see page 10).

> The flood must have brought you to the under levels of the catacombs. There is no trace of Ultron, who likely escaped. You hear coughing and turn to see Korg on the ground! The rocky creature is still alive!

Either Way

> "Thank you, strangers." Korg coughs. "Listen, there isn't much time. As I said before, I know a way off of this planet, but it doesn't depend only on me. Before they brought me to the interrogation room, I was in a cell with a prisoner from Earth, Doctor Hank McCoy, the Beast. He is a sort of genius and was rigging a device. He plans to reverse the effect of the portal that kidnapped us and make it send us back home."

The next question the heroes would surely ask is where the Beast is.

> "Somewhere in the bowels of this citadel." Korg shrugs. "I don't know exactly where, but we must find him."

Encourage the heroes to spend their Karma as needed to heal or regain focus. There will be little time for rest between now and the start of the next Act.

ACT TWO

The team has weathered the arena, saved Korg, and temporarily escaped the Technomancer. But now, if they want to find a way back home, the heroes must seek the aid of the mutant Beast, also trapped in the same complex where they are.

As the turmoil above ends, the Technomancer's guards start looking for the heroes. Speed and silence may be the characters only path through the catacombs.

This Act is a stealth scenario where the group avoids raising alarms while working to liberate the captured X-Man.

FINDING BEAST

NOT ONLY COMBAT

In this Act, the objective is to showcase non-combat solutions to particular situations and should underscore action checks and basic powers. Encourage your players to find creative solutions to each situation. There's rarely only one way to solve a problem.

Characters start this Act where the last one ended: in the depths of the arena, a maze of corridors and catacomb-like chambers. Broken pipes, exposed framework, and debris from Hulk's destructive spree litter the scene. However, Korg is unsure of the route to use in getting back to Beast's cell in the laboratory section of the facility.

Use the abstract map below to guide the players through the complex.

Each location of the catacomb is connected to one or more of the others through corridors and passages. There are several paths the heroes can take to reach McCoy's cell.

Remind the heroes that agents of the Grandmaster are sure to be scouring the area and it is imperative to avoid discovery while attempting to find and free Beast.

Each location provides an obstacle or a problem of some kind for the group to overcome and recommends possible solutions.

NEVER SPLIT THE PARTY!

Classic RPG advice says it is always wiser to stick together. This is also true in this scenario. The Narrator should encourage the team to stay together, but if they really want to split, they can. If they do, they'll have greater chances to Raise the Alarm, as they will visit more locations (see page 10).

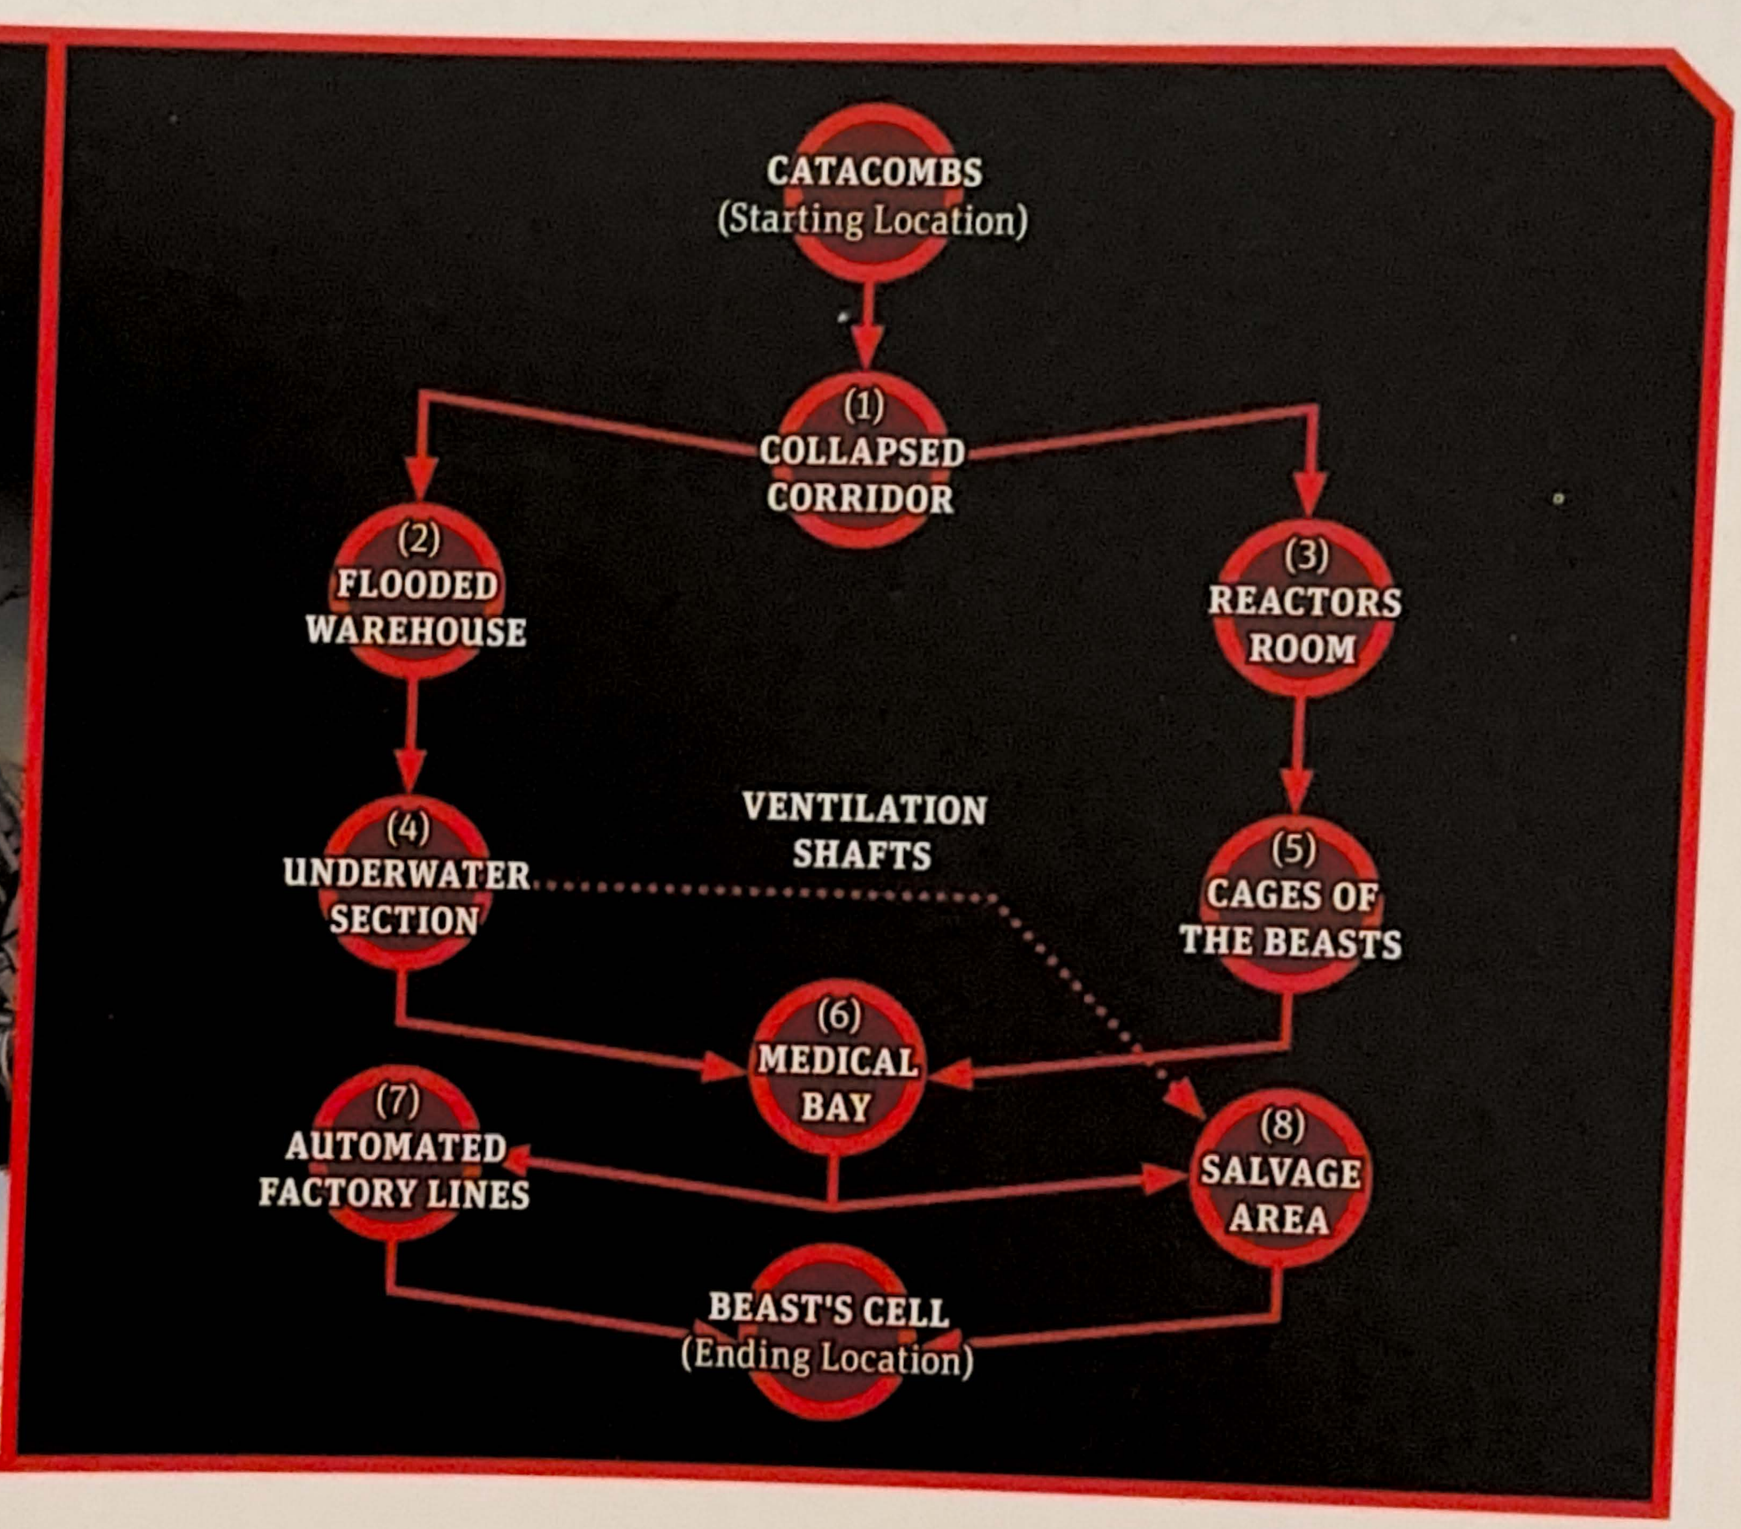
Art by Scott Eaton, Jaime Mendoza & Frank D'Armata



Korg's Assistance

Korg is assumed to have survived Act One and is traveling with the group. If the group splits, they need to determine which group Korg travels with.

Korg should never take the focus off the players' heroes. He can only interact with the scene mechanically by using the Inspiration power to boost a hero:

Inspiration

The character's words inspire their allies.

Power Set: None
Prerequisites: None
Action: Standard
Duration: 1 turn
Effect: The character inspires an ally in earshot. The ally gains an edge on all action checks until the start of the character's next turn.

Raise the Alarm

Alarm Track

Failing a roll while crossing a location can cause the alarm to be raised. This is handled by ticking the boxes of the Alarm Track above. Every time a box is ticked, the Narrator should reinforce the sense of danger by describing the pounding feet of guards and alarms blaring throughout the facility.

If, at the end of the scene, the Alarm Track is filled, the alarm has been raised and this will cause problems in Act Three.

If the heroes failed to save Korg before the interrogation room was flooded during Act One, the ruckus caused means that the first 2 boxes of the Alarm Track are already filled when this scene starts.

Art by Jim Cheung, John Dell, and Justin Ponsor

Locations

1 - Collapsed Corridor

This passage has been seriously damaged. Cables, broken pipes, and pieces of concrete make advancing difficult and potentially dangerous.

Squeezing through the piles of debris to gain access to the rest of the compound is going to be difficult, especially if the heroes are trying to do so quietly. If they choose to do so, every hero attempts an Agility vs. TN 12 action check. If at least 1 of them fails the roll, tick 1 box of the Alarm Track (1 in total, not 1 for each player who failed).

If the players don't explicitly say they are trying to be particularly silent, automatically check an Alarm Box, but they don't risk injuring themselves.

2 - Flooded Warehouse

This area must have been a warehouse of some sort, given the number of crates and containers in it. Water pours down from the broken ceiling and debris is floating around. You don't want to be in the shoes of the warehouse workers who will be tasked to put all this back in order.

Unbeknownst to the heroes, there is a hover-drone scouting the area, hidden in a dark part of the ceiling. Unless the characters spot it in time, passing a Vigilance vs. TN 12 action check, the drone silently gives the alarm (fill 1 box of the Alarm Track) and it starts to stealthily shadow them. The heroes can roll to spot it every time they enter a new location, but the damage is already done. If the characters spot the drone in time, they can simply avoid it with an Agility vs. TN 12 action check or by destroying it. However, they have only 1 combat turn before the machine raises the alarm.

3 – Reactors Room

This large hall is full of big, tank-like machines emitting a low, constant hum. Judging from the red lights flashing on the control panels, the earthquake caused some problems with them.

A maintenance drone is trying, without success, to fix them. As you enter, the drone spots you and says "Thanks to the Grandmaster, you finally came! The reactors have been compromised! Only level-7 technicians can fix them!"

The drone, identification number Ultr-282422, mistook the heroes for technicians. To maintain the misunderstanding, a hero rolls an Ego vs. TN 12 action check. If the drone is convinced, the heroes can fix the reactors, forcing a reboot, with a Logic vs. TN 14 action check. If successful, Ultr-282422 is happy and the characters gain 1 Karma.

The drone is quite chatty, and the players can receive a useful hint about another location of the Narrator's choice.

If the characters fail in convincing the drone or in fixing the reactors, it becomes suspicious and raises the alarm. The same happens if the players attack him. Ultr-282422 is a non-combat model, so no roll is required to crush it, but a silent alarm is hardwired in its circuits. If it ceases to function, it will trigger. In both cases, check 1 box on the Alarm Track.

4 - Underwater Section

This area is almost completely underwater. If you want to cross it, you must swim.

The path forward is flooded, requiring a deep dive and swim to navigate through it. The inundated zone offers few opportunities for catching your breath.

To continue along this way, each team member must pass a Resilience vs. TN 12 action check. Otherwise, they must either backtrack and find another way, or reach the end suffering dMarvel x2 points of Health damage.

There is another option to navigate the area, passing through the ventilation shafts. One of them is still above the water level and can be easily reached, but spotting it requires a Vigilance vs. TN 12 action check and an explicit request from the players. The shaft is large enough to let heroes of Average Size pass through it. The ventilation shaft leads directly to the Salvage Area.

5 - Cages of the Beasts

An intense, animal stench lingers in this area. It comes from the cages and cells all around, protected by force-fields. Better get out of there quickly.

The Grandmaster, apart from the heroes, snatched creatures and monsters from around the universe to spice up his games, all very dangerous.

Normally, they are kept isolated in the cells, but one of the force-fields has been damaged from the earthquake and now works erratically, flickering on and off. Inside that cell lurks a tentacled, nameless horror. The creature is mindless and guided by basic instincts, so it tries to grab a random hero with a tentacle. The hero can avoid the attack with an Agility vs. TN 14 action check. If they fail, the hero is grabbed and suffers dMarvel damage per turn until they break free. The hero can escape by passing a Melee vs. TN 16 action check, which can be attempted every turn. Other characters can help by giving 1 edge each. There is another way to deal with the monster. Tampering with the control panel of the cage's force-field, a hero can overcharge it (Logic vs. TN 12 action check). The shock is enough to convince the creature to release its prey and cower back.

Luckily, the monster cannot leave the cage.

6 – Medical Bay

This area is an infirmary of some kind. There are diagnostic beds, robotic surgery units, regeneration tanks, and other medical equipment all around. The Grandmaster doesn't want his gladiators too damaged. Otherwise, they'll spoil his shows. Judging from the kind of machines here, they are advanced enough to heal any organic and numerous nonorganic forms of life.

Art by Bryan Hitch, Paul Neary & Paul Mounts

The heroes are in a real hurry, but it is possible that some of them are badly hurt at this stage of the adventure, so it could be worth using the machines of the medical bay. Being really high tech, they can heal the heroes quite quickly. The problem is that they are alien technology, so using them requires a Logic vs. TN 12 action check. On a success, each hero regains Health and Focus as if they had slept for eight hours. The machines also automatically cure any conditions the heroes might have.

If the heroes linger, staying half an hour or more, tick 1 box of the Alarm Track.

RECOVERY

A character who is not dead or shattered can regain lost Health and Focus as per the standard rules.

Recovery is explained on page 30 of the Starter Rules.

7 – Automated Factory Lanes

You must have stumbled into the factory where the Technomancer assembles his drones! There are literally hundreds of them, in various stages of production, assembled by the robotic arms of the automated lines. They look like an advanced model with the capacity of flight. Most of the automatons are inert, but there is a patrol of armed drones around. Better to stay put.

The drones that patrol the area are of the same kind that the heroes fought in the arena, so they are well armed. But unless the Alarm Track is already filled, they aren't on high alert and can be taken out with a stealth takedown, which requires an Agility vs. TN 12 action check. Each success dispatches 1 drone. If all the guards are stealthily dispatched, nothing bad happens. Otherwise, the drones call for reinforcements (tick 1 box on the Alarm Track) and the surviving ones should be fought normally.

The patrol is composed of 1 Ultron drone per hero.

TAMPERING WITH THE DROID FACTORY

The drones assembled in the Automated Factory Lanes are the ones Ultron will employ against the party, so it could be worth checking the lanes. Disabling the factory is impossible, but with a Logic vs. TN 14 action check, they can tamper with the programming of the drones, inserting a vocal command that disables them! If the roll is a Fantastic success, it is even better: the heroes will insert a special command that will make these specific drones their allies!

This will be very useful during Act 4 (see page 20).

8 - Salvage Area

This enormous deposit is filled with piles of assorted salvage, probably destroyed spaceships and other junk collected from Grandmaster's portals. Two giant-sized robotic arms grab this stuff and throw it into a compactor, probably the first part of a recycling process.

There is nothing of real interest in this area, except for the fact that the exit is placed near the compactor and that the automated arms aren't really able to distinguish between living beings and pieces of junk.

Unless the heroes are really stealthy and reach the exit using the cover of the pile of junk (passing an Agility vs. TN 12 action check), one of the arms smashes a random hero, causing dMarvel x2 damage.

Other ways of dealing with the arms are possible. For example, hammering them down (a Melee vs. TN 12 action). In this case, the noise is enough to automatically tick 1 box on Alarm Track (in addition to the 1 below).

Alternatively, the mechanical arms can each be disabled with a well-placed shot, which requires passing two Agility vs. TN 14 action checks, one for each arm.

If successful, the arms break and crash to the ground with a thunderous sound, enough to tick 1 box on the Alarm Track.

"DOCTOR MCCOY, I PRESUME?"

Once the heroes make it through the last location, they finally reach the detention area.

"I recognize this place. It is the prison," Korg says. "And this is our cell," he adds, pointing a stony finger toward a door. There is a terminal next to it detailing the prisoner:

HOLDING CELL: ADVANCED HUMAN MUTANT "BEAST" USE CAUTION WITH ALL INTERACTIONS. PRISONER IS ALLOWED ACCESS TO APPROVED SALVAGE.

"Hmpf" Korg pulls a face "They didn't even mention I was in this cell too."

Cracking the lock requires a Logic vs. TN 14 action check. On a failure, the hero still unlocks the door, but not without tripping a silent alarm. Tick 1 Alarm Box in the previous section.

Inside, a bespectacled Beast (AKA Dr. Hank McCoy) sits reading, surrounded by a series of tables littered with salvaged materials. In the corner is a cot along with a few basic necessities resting atop an end table.

"Oh, hello, Korg! I didn't expect you to come back," the mutant says, surprised.

"And you brought friends too! Please be my guests," he adds.

Beast recognizes at least 1 of the heroes. After the character and Korg make the presentations and explain the situation, McCoy agrees to share his plan with the group.

BEAST'S PLAN

McCoy shows you a device, a sphere the size of a pineapple.

"This is the B.R.I.A.D.," he explains.

"It stands for Boson Reticulate Interdimensional Aperture Dilation device, and it is our way back home," he continues.

"But hold your horses. It isn't so simple," McCoy adds, cleaning his glasses. "The B.R.I.A.D. harnesses the power of a nearby portal to travel back to its point of origin. This means we must get within proximity of the Great Portal. Then I'll need to tune it to its predetermined jump point. Bring me near the portal, buy me some time, and we'll all be home for breakfast."

Escaping the facility with their new allies is the first order of business. Only later can they gain access to the Great Portal.

Beast knows the following information:

- The arena is not actually in space, but is in fact, in a fabricated zone designed by the Grandmaster and the various scientists and engineers he has "employed." The zone is built on a planetoid orbiting around the planet known as Sakaar.
- Sakaar's most prominent feature is a giant wormhole called the "Great Portal" that pulls in entities and debris from across the Multiverse. It is very close to the planetoid's current position.
- The Grandmaster utilizes heroes and villains drawn through the wormhole to fight in the arena for his own entertainment.
- Ultron is the Champion of the Arena and is working alongside the Grandmaster, even if nobody knows his real agenda.

Once the team understands the framework of the plan, it is time to continue to Act Three!

BEAST (HANK McCOY)

Size: Big
Distinguishing Features: Pointed teeth and ears, claws, blue fur

Hank is widely regarded as one of the world's greatest scientists and super heroes. In recent years, he's taken on a leadership role among the X-Men and mutant society by becoming the leader of X-Force.

Though something of a hothead in his youth, Hank developed a more stringently logical demeanor. The more seasoned Beast has become impersonal, seeing his allies more as assets than people.

ACT THREE

The plan Beast offered is a good one, but the team faces a battle to reach the scrap-filled skies and the Great Portal beyond. This Act leads the party through some mischievous encounters to reach the surface of the planetoid.

THE GREEN MENACE

While the heroes are devising a plan, the Narrator should remind them that the Hulk is still causing mayhem.

CRASH! The facility is filled with the sounds of roars, shredding metal, firing weapons, and screaming combatants. Hulk is still on a rampage, and he isn't far away. Well, maybe it is not so bad after all. The chaos can give you the distraction you need to escape.

HULK SMASH!

In particular, the presence of the Hulk should be used more like an impending threat than a direct fight (which the heroes have very little chance of winning).

THE ALARM TRACK

During this Act, the opposition will be stronger or weaker depending on the results of the Alarm Track from Act Two.

Like in real life, in the Marvel Multiverse Role-Playing Game, actions have consequences!

THE SKRULL

There is another cell populated in the complex not far away from the one where Beast was held. While the heroes prepare to go, the prisoner inside calls them.

"Hey you! You're not going to leave me here, right?"

The person speaking is a well-dressed man sporting a Van Dyke beard and a wry smile. He is quite famous too, and the heroes know him.

"Genius, billionaire, playboy, philanthropist. Yes, I am Tony Stark. And now, please, do you mind opening this cell?"

He looks identical to Tony Stark, but he's actually a Skrull agent!

Wabath, the Skrull, does everything in his power to convince the heroes to release him from his prison, including lies and treachery. He claims to have been captured by the Grandmaster and that Ultron has stolen and dismantled his suit.

If the heroes decide to free him, they first must bypass the lock, requiring a Logic vs. TN 14 action check.

On a failure, the heroes still unlock the door, but also trip a silent alarm. Tick 1 box on the Alarm Track from Act Two.

Freeing the Skrull

If the heroes free "Tony Stark," read the following text.

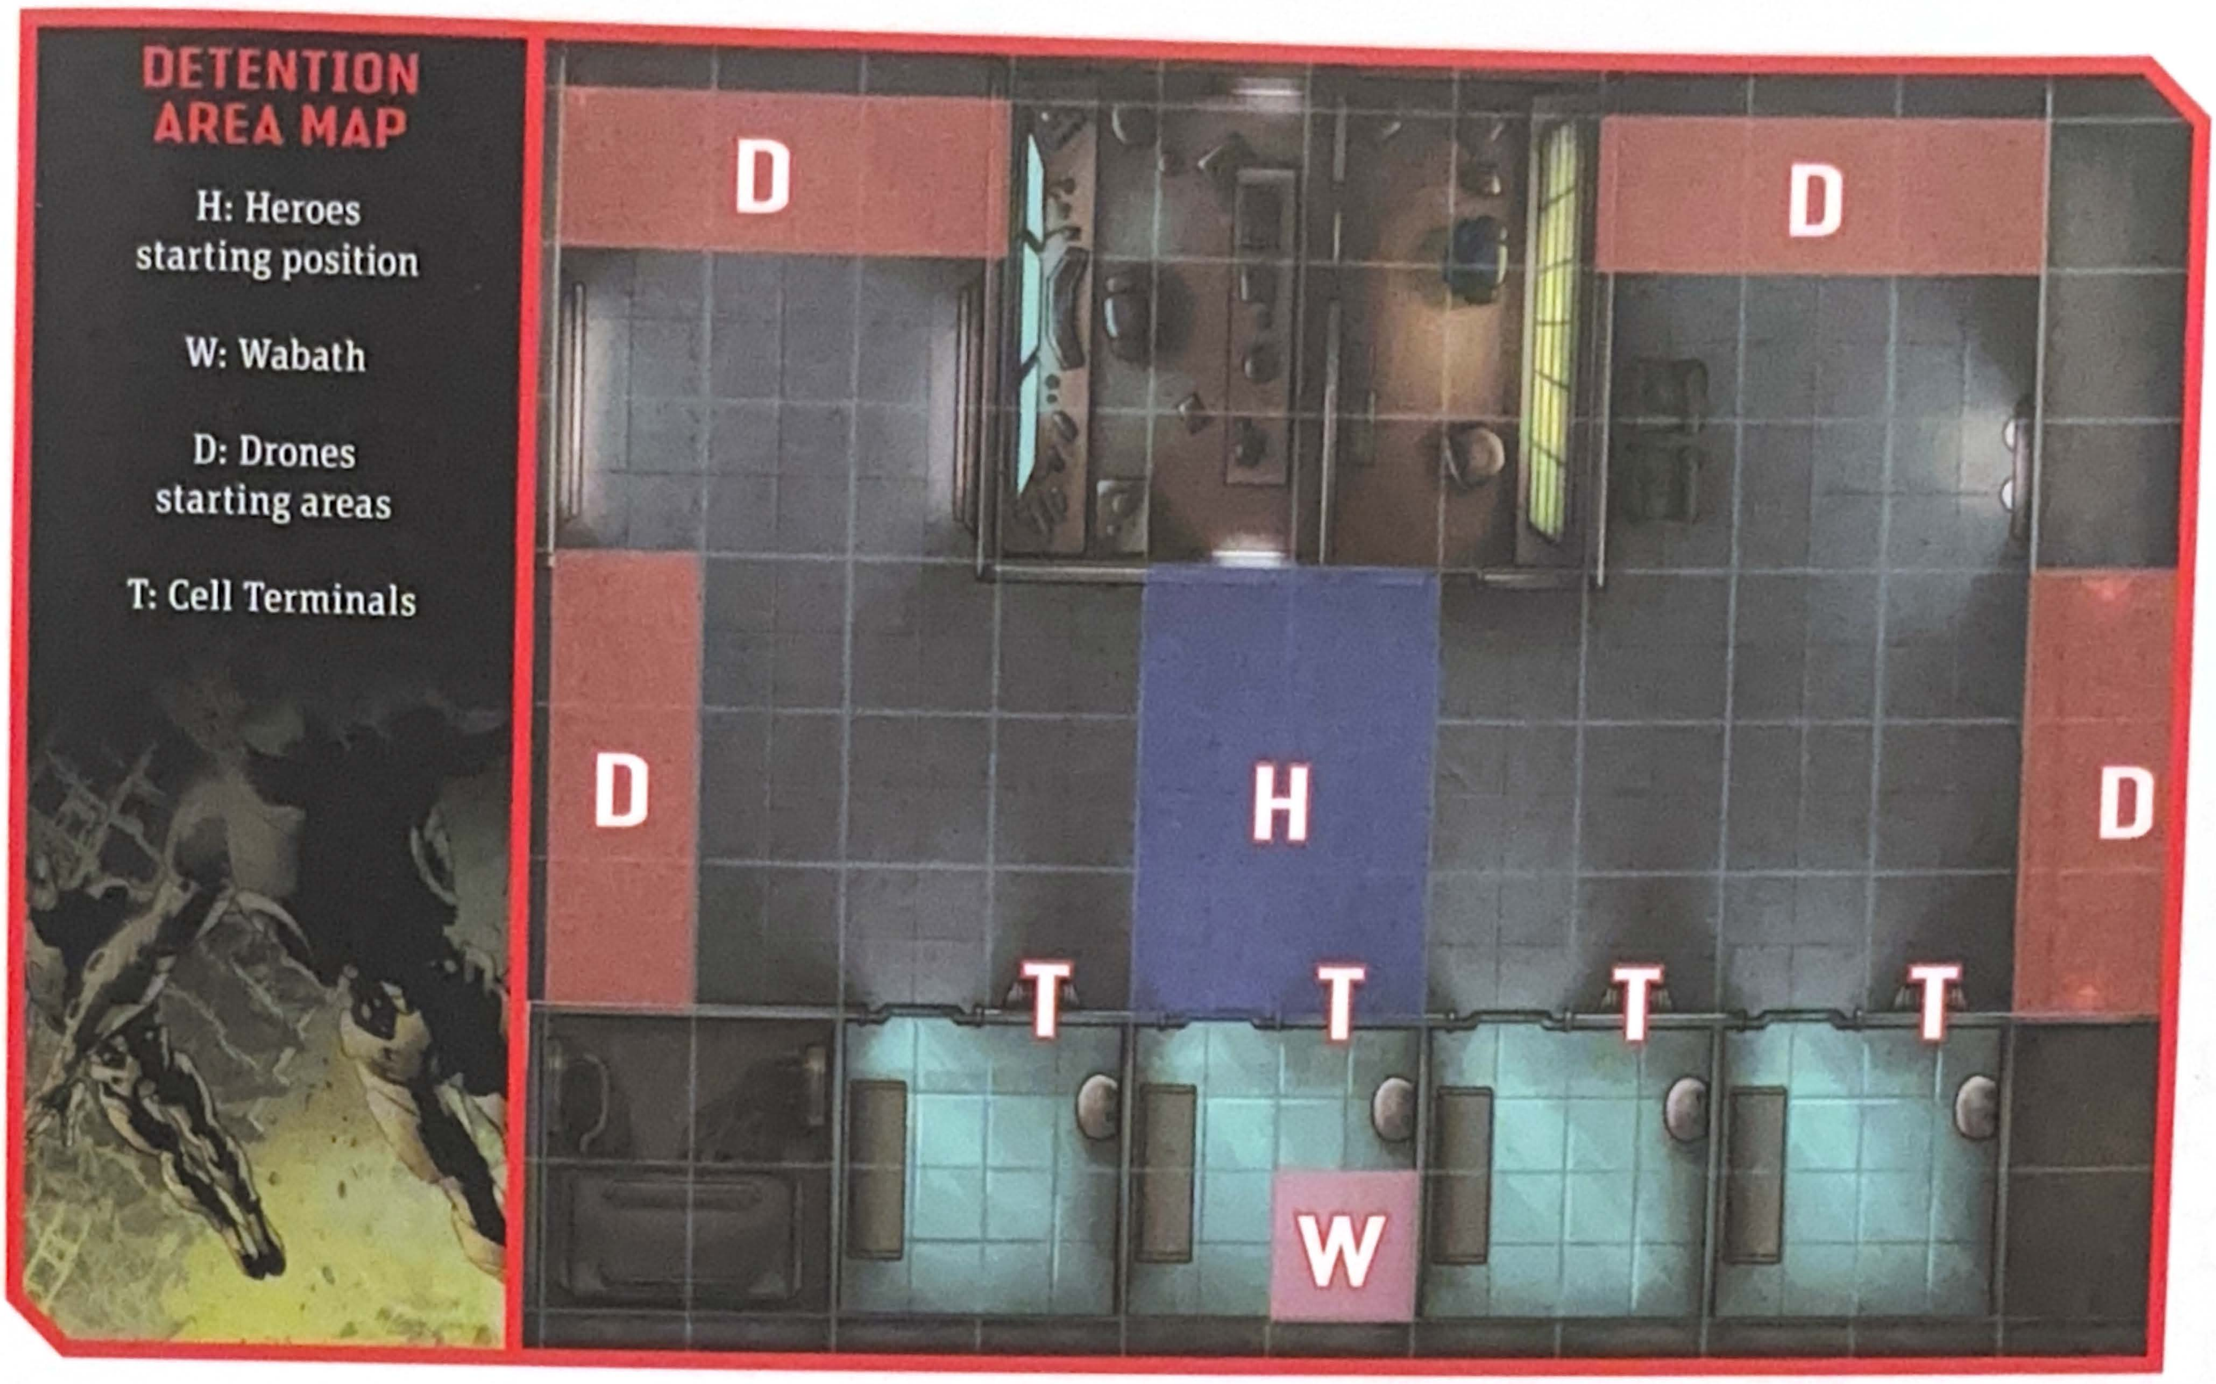
Tony Stark comes out of his cell, just in time. A patrol of Ultron drones crashes in and starts shooting!

"Well, it's time to go!" Tony says, but his voice is different, as is his shape. He isn't Iron Man, but a shape-shifting Skrull!

The alien smiles at you before disappearing into the darkness, leaving you to fight Ultron's goons!

The sound of the fight mixes with the distant roar of the Hulk.

There is 1 drone per hero, or 2 per hero if the Alarm Track is filled.



Art by Bryan Hitch, Paul Neary & Paul Mounts

Not Freeing the Skrull

If the heroes don't free "Tony Stark," read the following text.

> "You filthy human!" Tony Stark hisses in rage. His voice changes along with his appearance. This creature is definitely not Iron Man... He is a Skrull!
>
> CRASH! At that very moment, you hear Hulk's roar on the upper floor and the ceiling suddenly collapses from the fury and weight of the green giant!
>
> Blinded by the dust, you see the Hulk pass nearby, ignoring you, before continuing his trail of destruction.
>
> Hulk's intrusion also destroyed the door of the Skrull's cell, freeing the creature, who attacks you, just before the lights flicker, leaving you in total darkness.

Fighting in darkness causes trouble to the heroes' rolls unless the group has devices or powers that can make light.

In the 3rd turn of combat, the lights switch on (canceling the trouble), as a patrol of Ultron drones join the battle.

There is 1 Drone per hero, or 2 per hero if the Alarm Track is filled.

SETTING THE SCENE

Take the Detention Area map and put it on the table so that every player can see and easily reach it. Position Tony Stark or Wabath in the square marked with W. Then position the rest of the enemies in the red squares. At this point, the players can place the token representing their hero in the remaining blue squares.

Tactics

If Wabath the Skrull is attacking the heroes, he uses his powers to Reverse Punch the most vulnerable hero. In the darkness and cascading debris, he'll also shift his appearance between different heroes, making it difficult to determine who the correct version is. Heroes that lose line of sight with the Skrull roll with trouble on their next attack made against him, reflecting their hesitance as they confirm that they're attacking the right target. He will flee if his life is endangered, using his Stilt Steps power to escape.

ESCAPING THE PRISON

Once the Skrull and the drones are dealt with, one way or another, the heroes face a tough road to escape the prison because the entire place is collapsing.

There are four areas to cross to leave the prison and reach the surface. This part of the scenario can be played directly on the prison map contained in this Starter Set. The entrance squares and the exit are marked on the map for players.

"It's Collapsing!"

Each area presents dangers and enemies of some kind, but they aren't the only threat in this section. Debris is falling from everywhere, risking killing someone.

During this scene, at the start of each turn, the Narrator rolls an Agility check and applies what follows:

- On a total of 6-9, each hero takes dMarvel x3 points of Health damage, but all the enemies in the current area are destroyed!
- On a Fantastic success, all enemies in the current area are similarly destroyed by collapsing debris, but the heroes take no damage.
- On all other results, nothing happens.

SENSE OF URGENCY

The frequent dMarvel rolls in this section are meant to encourage a sense of urgency. Sometimes that urgency/threat can play to the heroes' favor. But there may be times where it comes crashing down around them.

Additionally, these rolls give extra opportunities to showcase the special features of the dMarvel dice rolls.

1 - Energy Substation

You are in an energy substation. Exposed power conduits whip through the air with surprising force while drones attack you!

While in this area, each turn, the heroes make an Agility vs. TN 12 action check or take dMarvel points of Health damage.

- Opposition: 1 Ultron drone per hero, or 2 if the Alarm Track is filled.

2 - Collapsing Inferno

This room contains several drones and an activated trash incinerator that has collapsed upright through the floor. Its fiery maw roars beneath you, threatening to devour and cremate everything around it. You better hurry!

The drones in this room aren't incredibly dexterous and must make an Agility vs. TN 12 action check or stumble and destroy themselves. Additionally, heroes with an Agility Defense Score of less than 12 make the same check at the start of their turn. On a failure, they fall prone 1 space from the incinerator. If they are already within 1 space, they slide into its blazing gullet, taking dMarvel x 3 points of Health damage before escaping on the next turn.

- Opposition: 1 Ultron drone per hero, or 2 if the Alarm Track is filled.

3 - Test Subjects

This place looks like an abandoned workshop. There are several drones around, but they look patched up and welded together with bits and pieces acquired from a multitude of machines, not top-notch models.

The drones in this section are quite weak. A Logic vs. TN 14 action check allows the heroes to find the drones' weak points, granting them an edge on all combat rolls against their opponents.

- Opposition: 1 Ultron drone per hero, or 2 if the Alarm Track is filled.

4 – Security Checkpoint

This room is a security checkpoint for the Ultron drones and contains a number of his constructs. You glimpse a set of stairs up on the other side of the room. You are near the surface, after all. There's just enough time to wipe away these tin cans...

CRASH! The right wall explodes, and Hulk comes in, ripping apart the guards! This place is getting crowded!

There are several ways for the heroes to deal with the Hulk.

First, they can maneuver past the raging beast with an Agility vs. TN 14 action check. On a success, they make it out of the room. On a failure, they make it out but also take dMarvel x 2 points of Health damage.

Alternatively, they can just plow through. Each hero who tries this takes dMarvel x 4 points of Health damage.

- Opposition: 2 Ultron drones per hero, or 4 if the Alarm Track is filled. Hulk automatically destroys 1 drone per turn.

Getting through the area allows the heroes to reach the stairs and then the surface. Proceed to the next section.

OUTSIDE, FINALLY!

You run upstairs, leaving the roars of the Hulk behind you.

You are just outside the walls of the castle where the arena was. There are no guards around. They are too busy dealing with your big, green friend.

The fresh air, filled with alien fragrances, hits your nostrils.

"My suspicions are confirmed. We are on a hunk of rock orbiting around planet Sakaar, the kingdom of the Grandmaster." Beast says.

The sky is filled with debris and other things slowly orbiting around a halo of glowing light.

"Do you see that thing?" Beast continues. "It is the Great Portal. At the moment, it is inactive, but we must be ready to reach it when it wakes up. Better find a place to lie low for a while."

You aren't home yet, but you are very close now!

Beast is right. The Great Portal activates cyclically. At the moment, it is dormant. It's probably a good idea to find a place to hide and rest. Luckily, there are grottos and ravines around the castle, ideal to stay hidden from Ultron's guards.

The players can rest for 4 hours before the Great Portal wakes up and Act Four begins.

ACT FOUR

During this Act, the heroes reach the wormhole to escape the planet, but another facsimile of Ultron blocks the exit, alongside his best troops and his lieutenant, Nebula. The heroes fight to give Beast enough time to activate his device and back-hop through the Great Portal and make it home. Hulk makes a second appearance to fight alongside the heroes in their bid for escape.

Are you ready for the grand finale?

THE WAY HOME

The light suddenly changes. You look out of the grotto where you've been hiding and see that the halo in the sky is pulsating.

"The Great Portal is activating. Time to go if we don't want to miss the bus home!" Beast says.

The skies around Sakaar are filled with orbiting debris, small asteroids that have poured out of the wormhole, starship wreckage, and assorted stuff.

The gravity is very low there, but there is enough atmosphere to let the heroes breathe.

Parkour on the Asteroids!

The last scene of the adventure requires the characters to move and fight across suspended asteroids. The asteroids float erratically, making jumping from one to another very difficult.

In gaming terms, heroes crossing a gap between asteroids need to pass an Agility vs. TN 12 action check or miss the target and float erratically in space! The largest gap characters can cross is equal to their Jumping Speed.

A character floating erratically has their Speed reduced to 1 and trouble on all Melee and Agility action checks until they land on another asteroid again.

The same effect happens in close combat if the hero gets knocked back.

If a character is knocked off the map, the gravitational pull of the Great Portal sucks them back to the nearest asteroid at the beginning of the next turn.

Heroes capable of flying can move at their ease among the asteroids, ignoring the rules above.

THE PURSUERS

You are jumping from one asteroid to the next when you hear some sounds behind you. Someone is flying from the castle toward the asteroids. It is a group of Ultron's minions, led by Ultron, a different model from the one you battled before. Another person is flying at his side.

"Nebula!" Korg says "I was wondering when Ultron's lieutenant would show up!"

"Capture these fugitives!" Ultron orders.

"Aye aye, boss," Nebula smirks. "They won't escape!"

Without a sound, the drones plummet down onto you!

The characters fight 1 last encounter before reaching safety.

There are 3 Ultron drones for each hero to fight, in addition to Ultron (Act 4) and Nebula. The drones have been fitted with jetpacks, so they have a movement capacity of Fly 5.

SETTING THE SCENE

Take the Space map and put it on the table so that every player can see and easily reach it. The players place their hero's token in the blue squares (see next page). Don't place enemies during the setup. They arrive at the end of the first round, entering from the red squares. Hulk, arriving on the second round (see page 20), enters the game on the green square.

SPACE MAP

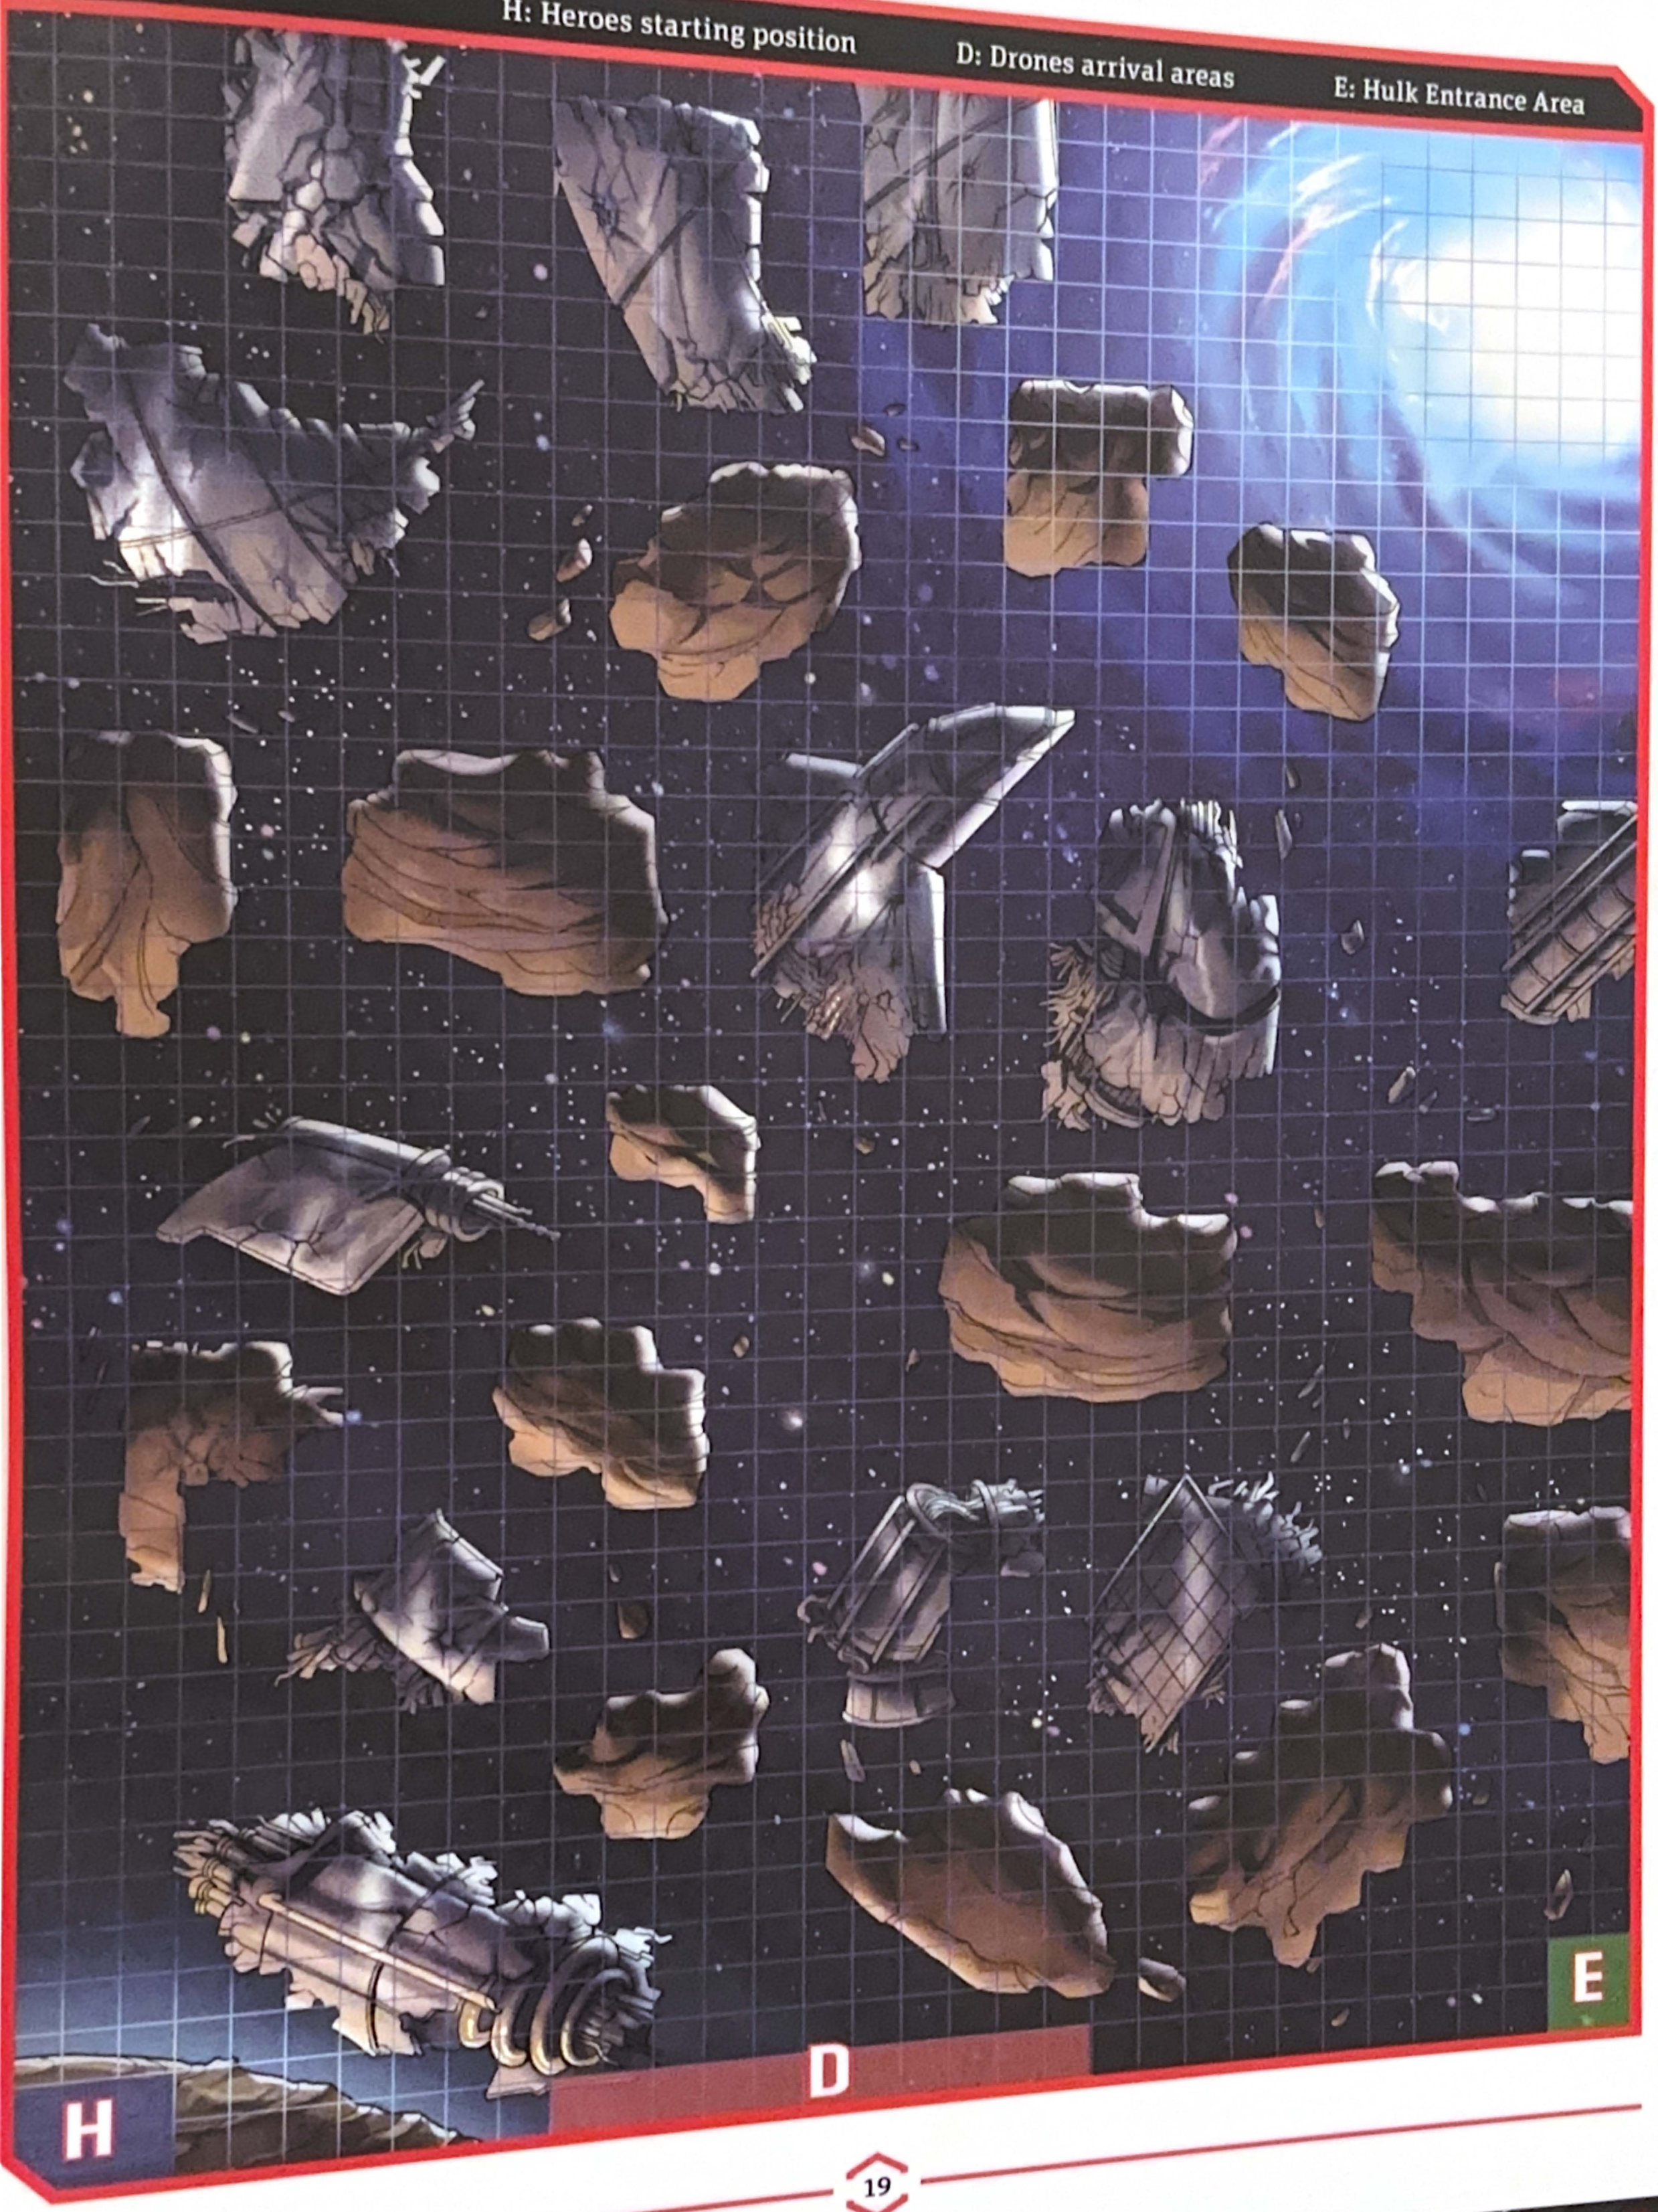
D: Drones arrival areas

E: Hulk Entrance Area



EPIC BATTLES

Sometimes, you can't win in a toe-to-toe fight. This encounter is all about getting home as opposed to winning against a powerful opponent. Ultron won't be able to chase the heroes through the portal. Use Beast, Korg, or even Hulk to help reinforce the true objective of this scene.

The Narrator should work hard to keep the focus on the players' characters. On an allied NPC's turn, they should most often take simple actions that support the objective.

The Great Portal & B.R.I.A.D.

The heroes don't need to win this battle. They only have to buy time for Beast to use his device. The device synchs up to the Great Portal, so it is functional only at the beginning of turn 3.

In order to move a hero through the portal by way of his device, Beast needs his target to be within 5 spaces of the portal. Beast can then use an action or reaction to trigger the device and send the character home.

Party Crasher

As if there aren't enough problems, at the beginning of the second round of combat, an uninvited guest arrives.

Art by Matteo Lolli & Federico Blee

With a mighty bellow, Hulk appears and starts jumping on the asteroids too. You don't know if he is trying to reach the Great Portal or is simply trying to smash you and your enemies to pulp.

Thanks to his mighty leaps, the Hulk can move easily from one asteroid to another without any problem.

Tactics

Nebula starts the combat by using her Battle Plan power to inspire Ultron. She attempts to keep her distance and uses her Sniping and Elemental Burst powers to deal incredible damage with her cybernetic arm cannon at range. She uses her Counterstrike Technique reaction against enemies that make a close attack against her. Her Untouchable Position power assures that she won't get overwhelmed.

This Ultron is more powerful than the one the heroes encountered in the previous Acts. Ultron uses his Elemental Barrage against clustered foes and picks off individuals with his Elemental Blast. He saves his Elemental Burst for heroes that appear to be targeting him directly. His Damage Reduction makes it unlikely that the heroes will defeat him, but that's not the point. He can also use his Mighty and Flight powers to grab characters and haul them away from the portal.

The heroes should be used to fighting the Ultron drones by now. Likewise, the drones know how to defeat the heroes by targeting the weakest team members with their Sniping power.

Any allies that the heroes have will assist them in this encounter, but in a simplified capacity. Beast remains focused on standing near the portal and using his device to send someone home. Korg can aid 1 character per turn by giving them an edge on their next roll. Hulk goes berserk and attacks the nearest enemy, destroying 1 Ultron drone per round.

"HEY, I KNOW THESE DRONES!"

If the heroes reprogrammed the drones in the Factory Lane during Act 2 (see page 12), they recognize them as the ones attacking now!

If the heroes rolled a success when reprogramming the drones, they can spend an action to disable all of them. If they had rolled a Fantastic Success and inserted the special command, they can take control of the drones, who now fight on the players' side!

DAUGHTER OF THANOS

Not long ago, Nebula was pulled through the Great Portal herself and swiftly formed a tight alliance with the Grandmaster and Ultron. It is unknown what her true motivations might be currently, but they almost certainly include finding her own way off-planet.

WHAT NOW?

What can a player do once their character is through the portal? The Narrator should give the first player to escape the opportunity to play Korg, deciding where the alien goes and allowing him to help other heroes as needed. The second player to get their hero through can take control of Beast and his objectives. The third player can play as Hulk. After that, there shouldn't be too much time left in the rest of the act.

THE AFTERMATH

MOVING FORWARD

Part of a great adventure (or comic book) is leaving the story on a cliff-hanger. This section helps the Narrator tie up loose ends, but it also offers a tease of what players can look forward to in future adventures.

The Great Portal's light is dwindling. It is going to close. It's now or never!

Once all heroes have escaped to their homes or have been captured by the Grandmaster's servants, the scenario ends.

There are a few possibilities for how the adventure can wrap up.

The Heroes Fail

It's possible that 1 or more heroes will fail to make it through to their home. This becomes more likely as other heroes make their escape and fewer allies are on the battlefield.

If the other heroes have escaped and all remaining heroes have fallen unconscious, the unconscious heroes are recaptured and taken back to the arena. Remember, Korg, Beast, and the Hulk can all serve as allies that get the heroes through the portal, so a complete failure is unlikely.

The Heroes Escape

If all of the heroes make it through the portal, they've managed to escape Planet Hulk! They are now free to return to the defense of their own homes against ne'er-do-wells and villains. This is a major accomplishment, as not only did they save their own skins, but they managed to rescue several other heroes in the process.

Beast is especially grateful. He was imprisoned for some time and wasn't sure he would ever have an opportunity to escape.

Either Way

Those heroes who escaped back to their homes have another bizarre and dangerous experience under their belt, while those that were left behind are forced to continue to do battle in the Grandmaster's Arena. Will a rescue mission have to be mounted? Will they find another way to escape? These are great questions for you to answer at your own tables!

Encourage your players to create their own heroes and stories by picking up the Core Rulebook!
