

DUNGEON
CRAWLER CARL
ROLEPLAYING GAME

ATLAS: TUTORIAL FLOORS

TABLE 1: THE HUD

HUD ELEMENT	INDICATION	NOTES
Health Bar	Shows a crawler's damage level	Decreases from right to left. Green from 100% to 66%; Yellow from 66% to 33%; Red from 33% to 0%.
Overhead Map	Map of a Neighborhood, Borough, City, or larger area	Often lootable from Bosses. Certain Skills give greater map access.
Green Dot	Self	—
Blue Dot	Other crawlers (controlled by players or the GM)	—
Red Dot	Hostile NPCs such as Mobs and Bosses	—
White Dot	Non-Hostile NPCs	—
Purple Dot	Non-crawler or non-residents of the dungeon (like Hunters or other tourists)	—
Orange Dot	Pets and Familiars	—
White with a Green X	Minion (or Mercenary)	—
Black X	Corpses turn to a black X, and if you hover over it, it'll tell you who it is if you're close enough. But otherwise it's a mystery.	✕
Cross instead of Dot	Elites	⊕ instead of •
Star instead of Dot	Important NPCs	★ instead of •
Spinning, Pulsing Star instead of Dot	God	Animated ★ instead of •
White Square	Stairs	□ instead of •
Skull over Crawler's Head	Killed a crawler. One skull per crawler killed.	—
Golden Skull over Crawler's Head	Killed a leaderboard crawler. One golden skull per leaderboard crawler killed.	—
Star over Crawler's Head	Killed a Neighborhood Boss	—

TABLE 2: ITEM TYPE

ROLL OR CHOOSE	TYPE
1–2	Enchanted Mundane Item or Weapon: Choose the type of weapon or item the PCs would use or what viewers would find funny
3–4	Enchanted Clothing: Choose the type of clothing based on what the PCs wear or what viewers would find funny
5–6	Enchanted Accessory: Choose the type of accessory based on what the PCs might wear or what viewers would find funny

TABLE 3: ENCHANTED MUNDANE ITEM OR WEAPON

ROLL OR CHOOSE	RESULT
1	+X Stat Bonus
2	+X Skill Bonus
3	A Buff (not Skill or Stat bonuses)
4	A Passive Skill at Rank equal to the Floor
5	Inherent Spell* (no Mana cost; with Cooldown based on power level—GM's choice)
6	Roll on Table 6: Something Unique

TABLE 4: ENCHANTED CLOTHING

ROLL OR CHOOSE	RESULT
1	+X Stat Bonus
2	+X Skill Bonus
3	A Buff (not Skill or Stat bonuses)
4	Resistance to Acid, Electric, Fire, Ice, or Poison damage
5	+1 Damage Resistance
6	Roll on Table 6: Something Unique

TABLE 5: ENCHANTED ACCESSORY (JEWEL, BELT, PATCH, TATTOO, ETC.)

ROLL OR CHOOSE	RESULT
1	+X Stat Bonus
2	+X Skill Bonus
3	A Buff (not Skill or Stat bonuses)
4	External Buff of either Recovery (full Health) or Restore (full Mana) once per Floor
5	Inherent Spell* (no Mana cost; with Cooldown based on power level—GM's choice)
6	Roll on Table 6: Something Unique

When you gain an item with an inherent Spell, it has a fixed Rank. The Rank of the Spell typically follows the same values as seen below for Skill Ranks, though exceptions are common, like Carl's "Protective Shell" was Rank 15 when he first got it. Spells gained this way don't cost Mana to cast, but have added cooldowns—usually 2 hours per Spell Rank.*

TABLE 6: SOMETHING UNIQUE

ROLL OR CHOOSE	RESULT
1	GM's choice
2	Interacts with a god
3	The thing is intelligent
4	Summon minions to fight for you
5	Mimics something from the encounter where the loot box was earned
6	Player's choice (with GM approval)

ATLAS: TUTORIAL FLOORS

© 2026 Renegade Game Studios. All Rights Reserved. © and TM Matt Dinniman LLC

TABLE OF CONTENTS

THE WORLD DUNGEON	5
THE CRAWLER INTERFACE	5
CRAWLER INVENTORY	8
THE FIRST FLOOR	10
LOCATIONS	10
QUESTS	15
THE SECOND FLOOR	15
POPULARITY	16
LOCATIONS	16
QUESTS	18
LIFE (OR DEATH) INSIDE THE DUNGEON	19
THE SYSTEM AI	19
ACHIEVEMENTS & LOOT BOXES	19
LOOT	22
SAMPLE LOOT	23
NOTABLE CRAWLERS	28
CARL	28
PRINCESS DONUT	28
KATIA	29
DANIEL BAUTISTA	29
BRANDON ANDREWS	30
CHRIS ANDREWS	30
IMANI	31
YOLANDA MARTINEZ	31
ELLE MCGIBBONS	32
JACK	32

Tuesday, January 3rd
2:23 AM, Pacific Standard Time
Surviving Humans Take Note:
The Apocalypse WILL be Televised..
And this is your chance to be the star of the show.

Thanks to this solar system's regent, the Borant Corporation, you and all your meatsack friends have the opportunity of a lifetime: you get to enter the World Dungeon, an 18-floor spectacle where the grand prize is reclaiming your planet from the mudskippers.

Here's where we're at: We've punched every building into your planet's crust and repurposed all of it to create a labyrinth of galactic proportions. Every structure that had a roof is now being reengineered to build the world below.

Once the game starts, you'll get to participate in the mayhem. You'll face mobs of all shapes and sizes, battle boss monsters, complete quests, obtain items and upgrades, develop new skills, and if you do it all with a little panache, you might just survive long enough to make a splash in the ratings pool.

The bigger your presence, the more rewards you get. And the more rewards you get, the easier it is to survive. So don't just stab that monster and hope he dies slowly; cut him into tiny little pieces and bathe in his blood instead! Or even better, put your bare foot down on his fragile little skull and slowly, slowly crush it. For good measure, smear it around a bit, too. I promise you'll enjoy it... we both will.

Scared to go in alone? Bring a friend or six. We encourage parties of all sizes—at least at first. And even if you don't know a single surviving soul, plenty of other humans are lucky enough to have joined the crawl along with you—just under 13 million, in fact.

The first level of the World Dungeon will open approximately 18 seconds after the end of this announcement. Once the entrances are closed, you may no longer enter. If you enter, you may not leave until you have either completed all 18 levels of the World Dungeon or if you meet certain other requirements.

If you choose to enter the game, you must find a stairwell to descend to the next floor down. If you don't find one in time... let's just say you'll get to join all the humans who didn't survive the Collapse in blissful peace and quiet.

Once you enter the World Dungeon, I highly recommend you find and utilize a tutorial guild. Multiple tutorial guilds will be seeded throughout the dungeon on levels 1 through 3.

While you're inside, a Syndicate neutral observer AI—myself—will supervise the creation of the World Dungeon and ensure all the rules and regulations are properly followed.

If you have any additional questions, or if you wish to file an appeal, such requests must be submitted in writing directly to the closest Syndicate office... good luck with that.

Thank you for being a part of the Syndicate. Have a great day.

—The System AI

WARNING!

CONTENT WARNING

The Dungeon Crawler Carl Role-Playing Game, based on Matt Dinniman's New York Times bestselling book series by the same name, is unashamedly hilarious, irreverent, and, at times, extreme. By virtue of its source material, this RPG puts players in tense and potentially uncomfortable situations, and it includes content that may be inappropriate or unacceptable for some players.

As always, discuss boundaries with your dungeon party about what you are comfortable with at your table.

Players who are unfamiliar with the world of Dungeon Crawler Carl can expect the following (though this is not a comprehensive list): gross monsters, extreme violence, foul language, foot fetish content, overtly sexualized characters, evil oppressive governments and alien races, body horror, and gore. Player discretion is advised.

SPOILERS

The Dungeon Crawler Carl Roleplaying Game Starter Set contains spoilers for the first novel and, frankly, light spoilers for the whole series. If you haven't read Dungeon Crawler Carl, you might want to skip over the Locations sections below.

THE WORLD DUNGEON

An ornate staircase leads down into the light. Each step appears to be made of wrought iron, carved in an odd pattern depicting what could've been fish—or maybe demons. The staircase is wide enough to accommodate twenty people walking side by side. Glowing warmth radiates from the opening, coaxing you closer, deeper.

The metal stairs end at a marble floor and a hulking door that stands about thirty feet tall and just as wide. The arched wooden door is carved in the shape of a massive fish demon, just like the stairs.

The door opens easily inward, revealing a long hallway...

Will you go inside?

THE CRAWLER INTERFACE

As soon as you made the questionable decision to go into the light (haven't you seen any TV? They always say don't go into the light), your whole outlook on life changed. And while I do mean philosophically (unless you were a serial killer before—if so, congrats!), I also mean literally: the World Dungeon sharpens all of your senses and grants you a variety of new ways of seeing the world through the wonderful lens of augmented reality.

That's because of something we call an "enhancement zone." It's a fantastic piece of technology that can do all sorts of things like make you live longer, run faster, hit harder, and even see better—as long as you've got the proper wetware installed.

Fortunately, all you organics from worlds seeded with Primal Engines are born with it.

Not only does the enhancement zone give you a chance to experience what being upgraded feels like (it's a rush, ain't it?) but it also gives you access to more information than you'd normally be able to interpret. Basically, you've finally got reliable wetware in addition to that lump of fat and salt in your skull.

Upon entering the World Dungeon, a crawler retains all their typical senses (though that may change during Race Selection upon reaching the Third Floor). However, they also gain a few new ones, and those may require some getting used to. The most important of these is your Heads-Up Display (HUD).

THE HEADS-UP DISPLAY

The HUD appears across the crawler's vision. Two of the most essential elements displayed are their Mana Bar, which displays their current magical reserves, and their Health Bar, which shows how close a crawler is to death (green is good, red is dead—or close to it, anyway).

The HUD also includes windows and screens displaying a crawler's Stats, Inventory, tooltips, and system messages that automatically pop up whenever the crawler receives an announcement, notification, or achievement.

By default, these appear in the center of the crawler's field of view until minimized. However, crawlers can modify their HUD settings to make these larger or smaller, to add or remove elements (such as the View Counter), and to otherwise customize it to the crawler's preferences.

All of these are controlled simply with a crawler's mind and attention. Early on, many crawlers find they prefer the virtual keyboard option, and most grow to prefer it when mentally typing any messages.

THE MINIMAP

The feature that takes up the most space on a crawler's HUD is typically the minimap. Crawlers begin most floors with an empty map which fills in as they explore the dungeon. Different Mobs and important landmarks appear on the minimap with different colors and shapes (see Table 1, that I've attached for your convenience... and you're welcome, by the way.)

This is not a radar system that helps avoid ambushes. Invisible, hiding, or stealthy Mobs, may not appear on your minimap until you are right on top of them.

TABLE 1: THE HUD

HUD ELEMENT	INDICATION	NOTES
Health Bar	Shows a crawler's damage level	Decreases from right to left. Green from 100% to 66%; Yellow from 66% to 33%; Red from 33% to 0%.
Overhead Map	Map of a Neighborhood, Borough, City, or larger area	Often lootable from Bosses. Certain Skills give greater map access.
Green Dot	Self	—
Blue Dot	Other crawlers (controlled by players or the GM)	—
Red Dot	Hostile NPCs such as Mobs and Bosses	—
White Dot	Non-Hostile NPCs	—
Purple Dot	Non-crawler or non-residents of the dungeon (like Hunters or other tourists)	—
Orange Dot	Pets and Familiars	—
White with a Green X	Minion (or Mercenary)	—
Black X	Corpses turn to a black X, and if you hover over it, it'll tell you who it is if you're close enough. But otherwise it's a mystery.	✕
Cross instead of Dot	Elites	✚ instead of •
Star instead of Dot	Important NPCs	★ instead of •
Spinning, Pulsing Star instead of Dot	God	Animated ★ instead of •
White Square	Stairs	◻ instead of •
Skull over Crawler's Head	Killed a crawler. One skull per crawler killed.	—
Golden Skull over Crawler's Head	Killed a leaderboard crawler. One golden skull per leaderboard crawler killed.	—
Star over Crawler's Head	Killed a Neighborhood Boss	—

A crawler can mentally zoom in or out on their minimap. The standard HUD minimap shows a quarter of a square mile around you. If you've already received information on a Mob or one of the floor-specific map upgrades, such as the Neighborhood Map or Field Guide, larger sections may already be filled in, or Mob and crawler names appear above the appropriate symbols.

Wise crawlers learn what these mean early on. Unwise crawlers usually die, so there's no point in talking about them.

Crawlers may experience a slight adjustment period as they acclimate to utilizing these handy new tools, but those who survive long enough will soon grow to love the haptic buzz of a new notification. It's not like there's much choice, after all.

EXPANDING THE MAP

Crawlers who defeat Bosses can loot maps from their lifeless corpses. These special maps remove the fog of war in the area under the Boss's control and also reveal the locations of enemies and other crawlers in the area. Even after a crawler loots a map from the Boss, it remains as a persistent lootable item for any crawlers who also loot the Boss, regardless of their participation in combat. Each Boss tier drops a different type of map.

HEALTH MENU

In addition to the map, the HUD allows crawlers to access their Health menu when you get a boo-boo. Your overall Health is displayed as a percentage up to 100%, and past that, you can get all sorts of Buffs if you're a bad bitch, Debuffs if you're a naughty boy, and injuries when you really fuck up.

It also shows your Mana so you can cast Spells.

THE MESSAGING SYSTEM

The HUD also functions as your non-verbal communication hub. You can message your party members at any time with a thought, and the messages come across to their HUD. You can also message other crawlers once you link with them by fist-bumping like a true bro. Keep in mind that they might not see your message until they survive whatever shit they've just gotten themselves into or if they're doing something boring like sleeping.

The other reason a crawler might not see your message is because they're dead. Hey, it's the World Dungeon. Our motto is "Kill, kill, kill" for a reason. If you do receive such a message, the system alerts you that it has come from a dead crawler. It also lets you know if the crawler is on a wild trip somewhere weird with a "crawler unavailable" system message—hey, at least your buddy's not dead (yet, but they probably wish they were).

CRAWLER & CREATURE DATA

When you look at another crawler or creature, your HUD pulls up a bunch of information, like their level. If you make it to the Third Floor, you can also see their race and class. In addition, you can see how much ass they've kicked, shown via stars by their name that they've earned from killing Bosses.

You can also see how much of an asshole they are thanks to the little skulls by their name; those are a mark on their permanent record of every other crawler whose life they snuffed out. Take out a top-ten-ranked crawler, and that skull turns gold!

When you examine a critter, you get its name, level, and I even throw in some color commentary. You gotta know the horoscope of the thing that's trying to eat your face, right?

TRANSLATION SYSTEM

While it's funny as hell to watch you struggle to convey basic concepts to each other, the HUD helpfully converts all languages to Syndicate Standard. That way, you can make informed decisions as a group (even if they're still dumb decisions).

THE COUNTDOWN TIMER

Viewers and I (and let's face it, it's mostly me) get bored hella quickly watching y'all do the same old shit. That's why floors are only available for a limited time before they collapse and why priority one should be getting to another stairwell to descend into the next playground.

Since it's much more fun to watch your panicked faces as time runs out, your HUD always provides you with a countdown timer to when the whole floor (and your ass, if you're still there) goes bye-bye.

COMBAT SYSTEMS

In addition to tracking your own Health Bar, the HUD shows how much damage you deal to your enemies. That way, people across the galaxy get to laugh at the stunned expression on your face after your big bad attack barely does any damage to a Boss or Mob you never should've messed with in the first place.

You can also see if your target has any Buffs, bonuses, Debuff penalties, and all that good stuff.

SCRATCH PAD

Go ahead, write your ninja notes. I won't read them, I promise. But seriously... the interface lets you take notes, and some of you have memories like a sieve (looking at you, team Meadow Lark), so write that shit down.

CRAWLER INVENTORY

One of the best (and worst) things about humanity is your propensity for materialism. Here in the World Dungeon, we endeavor to highlight the worst parts of you, and in this case, it just so happens we can do that while helping you play the game more efficiently.

Every crawler has access to an Inventory for all the stuff they brought with them and everything they find here in the dungeon. You can store almost anything in your Inventory, so don't be shy about grabbing anything you come across on the Crawl. If you can lift it, you can grift it. Don't worry about how it works; just know that it does.

ADDING & REMOVING ITEMS

Adding items is quick and relatively painless: Simply pick up the item and, if it's heavy, hold it for more than three seconds, and it will qualify to be added to your Inventory. You can also automatically add items to your Inventory when you loot corpses.

Removing items is as easy as scrolling and selecting, except that the interface is in your mind. Want to use something? Just think about it, and it'll appear.

HOTLIST

Sometimes you'll want to line up specific items or Spells for even quicker use, so we've granted you a limited number of slots in your Hotlist to place them. Your Hotlist prevents you from having to search and scroll through your entire Inventory, and when every second counts, that might just keep you alive.

QUADRUPEL EXCEPTIONS

Yes, we really did think of everything. If you're a quadruped or another race that doesn't possess the physical ability to pick up items (No thumbs? No problem!), you can claim them for your Inventory with a separate but equally useful interface.

Simply get close to the item, and the system will note whether or not you can add it to your Inventory based on your Strength Stat and other factors. Item usage functions similarly; we make it easy for quadrupeds to use items without physically holding them (with appropriate limitations).

INTERFACE LOCKOUT

On some occasions, like when in the presence of a Dungeon Admin, we will automatically disable your Inventory, Hotlist, and weapons. Likewise, when you enter a production trailer or are removed from the dungeon for any other reason, access is restricted.

This measure ensures the safety of Dungeon Admins, extra-dungeon entities, and crawlers alike. We thank you for your understanding. And if you don't understand, we thank you for not understanding.

QUESTS

Another crucial element the HUD tracks for you is the to-do lists of dungeon activities you must complete. Here, at least, we give the busy work a cool name: Quests!

Life before the Crawl was full of quests, though you probably didn't view them that way:

Quest: Wash your clothes. Reward: You no longer have skid marks in your underwear. Or they're not as pronounced, anyway.

Quest: Work at your job. Reward: Money! And you and your children don't have to starve (at least not this month).

Quest: Woo that special someone. Reward: Prison time! Because you're creepy and weird and no one wants to see your collection of hand-painted fingernail clippings.

Here in the World Dungeon, we've got a whole host of quests for you to pursue. Some are easy. Some are tough. All are gonna give you experience, rewards, and loot that can help you last just a little bit longer in the dungeon.

You won't get any "official" quests until you're on the Third Floor, but quests are going to be a big deal if you make it that far.

INDIVIDUAL QUESTS

Superman. The Lone Ranger. Dick Tracy. They all thrive for two reasons: doing things their way and going it alone. Hell, it's even in one of their names: Dick.

Individual Quests are designed for loners, for crawlers who thrive in solo campaigns, for players with that classic "big Dick" energy. These quests are easy enough to complete without outside assistance yet still challenging enough that Failure might mean death. So don't half-ass it, or you might end up as Vice President one day.

GROUP QUESTS

Two's company, and three's a crowd, but when it comes to party quests, it's all hands on Dick. Compared to Individual Quests, Group Quests are grander in scale and difficulty, and the rewards increase proportionally.

It's better to bring a friend or seven when you've gotta stake down a coven of vampire nuns at midnight, and you definitely want someone watching your back when you're roaming sewers hunting clown-shaped child-eating nightmares. Rely on your fellow crawlers for as long as you can. Sometimes you don't know what you've got until it's gone.

THE FIRST FLOOR

Time to Level Collapse: Five Days

"Welcome, Crawler. Welcome to the First Floor."
—The System AI

You have a designated Crawler Number and a Crawler Name. You are assigned the Race of Human... probably. You are currently Level 1. You may choose a new race and class as soon as you descend to the Third Floor.

Your Stat points have been assigned based on your current physical and mental profile. Refer to your character sheet for more details.

This is the First Floor of the World Dungeon. And hey, it's creepy down here, and you don't know what you're doing! You should probably find a Tutorial Guild before things get even weirder (and they will—much, much weirder).

LOCATIONS

TUTORIAL GUILD

Not to be confused with "Da Tutorial Guild"

You're new here. We get it. That's why we've set up a few million Tutorial Guilds, also called training guilds, spread throughout the First Floor. Pick one, go inside, chat with the guildmaster, and you just might learn a thing or two about surviving the World Dungeon.

In Tutorial Guilds, you'll gain full access to your Crawler Menu, you'll be able to see your Health Bar and minimap, and you'll finally be able to review your in-game achievements and access loot boxes and rewards.

HALLWAYS (FIRST FLOOR)

You know that long, narrow space you entered when you walked through the stairwell doors? That's called a hallway, and like many others of its kind, it connects rooms to other rooms. Think of it as a street, but indoors. And instead of streetlights, a greenish glowing lichen on the walls and ceilings provides illumination.

Hallways not only get you where you need to go, but they also enable other crawlers and Mobs to get around, too. That means they're prime locations for conflict, so watch your back. And your front. Your sides, too. And... check above you every now and then. (Trust me on that one.)

STAIRWELLS

We already told you that each floor only exists for a limited amount of time, right? I'm pretty sure we told you that. If not, well, you know it now. If you want to escape the impending collapse of each level, you gotta find a stairwell to the next floor down.

Sometimes you can uncover stairwells via Quests, or you may have to defeat a Boss to reach one. If you're really lucky, you might stumble upon one out of sheer ignorance.

No matter how you find them, stairwells are the only reliable way for crawlers to reach the next floor down—yet another reason to always keep one eye open.

SAFEROOMS

Even when you're not running for your life in the World Dungeon, sometimes the game gets overwhelming, and you may need a place to take a load off, catch your breath, and chill. As a courtesy to all crawlers, we've placed hundreds of saferooms throughout the dungeon.

Inside saferooms, crawlers can order freshly prepared food from Bopca Protectors, rest and recover in magical beds in rented rooms, and watch excerpts of Dungeon Crawler World: Earth on the screens mounted in the common area.

Saferooms are just that: safe. And the dungeon has built-in consequences for those who violate that safety. It's a three-strike system (just like in Earth's baseball, but more fun):

- Strike 1: The crawler is frozen in place for 100 seconds and forced to listen to a recording about playing nice while the word NAUGHTY is displayed over their head.
- Strike 2: The crawler is frozen in place for one hour.
- Strike 3: The crawler is stripped of all gear and Inventory and teleported into a Mob nest.

BATHROOMS

Frankly, if you don't know how these work by now, you probably won't make it far enough into the dungeon for it to matter. But if you do happen to find one, do your business and get out. No lollygagging!

The bathrooms automatically adapt to accommodate your species and race, so don't worry about fitting your ass inside, whether you're a Sasquatch or a Pocket Kuma. Bathrooms count as saferooms, so you can take a dump in perfect solitude. Oh, and the toilet paper is unlimited, so wipe liberally—and properly.

NEIGHBORHOODS

Hallways also lead to full-on Neighborhoods, most of which are themed based on the Mobs that occupy them. They also have special rooms with unique purposes.

And, of course, every Neighborhood has a Neighborhood Boss, too. That guy (or gal) runs the town, and they usually don't take too kindly to outsiders (like you) wandering in and messing everything up. But if you kill them, you get a map of the whole Neighborhood, so that's handy.

Some examples of Neighborhoods on the First Floor include:

THE GOBLIN NEIGHBORHOOD

You'll never guess what Mob has made its home in the Goblin Neighborhood. All kidding aside, these quintessential First Floor Mobs (and classic crawler training fodder) actually have a functional, well-developed society and sense of community. There's even Goblin babies. Babies! Imagine if someone were to blow them up...

Here in the Goblin Neighborhood, you'll find all sorts of useful rooms, colorful characters, and interesting tools, weapons, and vehicles, many of which work properly—at least some of the time.

The Goblin Workshop: Many of these nifty resources are housed inside the Goblin Workshop, where Goblin Bomb Bards, Goblin Shamankas, and Goblin Engineers tend to hang out.

Need a Goblin Murder Dozer or a Goblin Copper Chopper? Commission one, and start cruising the dungeon halls.

How about some funpowder or Goblin Dynamite? A bit of ingenuity, and BOOM, you've got a whole arsenal of explosives.

Maybe you just want to commit wholesale murder on some low-level Mobs? Well, have I got good news for you...

The Goblin Boss Room: Deep within the Goblin Neighborhood is a special room where the Goblin Chieftain resides. He takes audiences by appointment only, and that's because he's overseeing a very important task, one that he trusts no one else to handle.

When you enter, you might hear the gentle hum of a lullaby or the soft coos of the room's occupants: Goblin babies. They're tiny, they're green, and they're the only time Goblins are ever considered anything close to "cute."

One well-timed explosion might just change all of that, so if you're a heartless murdering prick, the good news is the Goblin Neighborhood has everything you need to start the Crawl off with a bang.

BAD LLAMA NEIGHBORHOOD

What do barnyard livestock, molten lava, and trailer park-grade meth have in common? In the Bad Llama Neighborhood, the answer is everything.

Littered with Burger King wrappers and empty cans of Full Throttle, this tight-knit community of dee-luxe mobile homes harbors a thriving ecosystem of anthropomorphic camelids with bad attitudes. If you're looking for a quick score, or if you want to hire a couple of thugs to help you rob a 7-Eleven, you're in the right place.

Just don't flaunt your wealth in these parts—they don't take too kindly to uppity folk.

SCATTERER NEIGHBORHOOD

Did you know that a nuclear war was destined to befall your miserable planet in the late 21st century? Only the cockroaches would've made it, but they would've been transformed into ravenous horrors the size of a loaf of bread with nearly endless appetites, roaming the polluted wastelands of Earth until the heat death of your Solar System.

That's more or less what you're walking into when you visit the Scatterer Neighborhood. Mounds of garbage serve as colonies for dozens, hundreds, or even thousands of Scatterers. They'll eat anything, which means that a gentle waltz through their turf might just land you on the menu, so tread lightly and wear thick boots.

Hoarder Boss Room: What do you get when you cross rampant materialism with debilitating mental illness and a shit-ton of genetic manipulation? If you're oblivious enough to enter the Hoarder Boss Room inside the Scatterer Neighborhood, you just might find out.

Can you navigate the towers of decades-old magazines and hills of unwashed clothes without creating a trash avalanche? Will you survive the horrors concealed within the piles of fast-food containers long enough to unearth the treasures within? Probably not, but good luck anyway!

TROGLODYTE NEIGHBORHOOD

The Troglodyte Neighborhood combines the sticky humidity and verdant foliage of the Florida Everglades with the social graces of... well, the Florida Everglades. In fact, the only reason its inhabitants still have teeth is because they can regrow them if they ever fall out.

Quicksand, murky waters, poisonous plants—it's a jungle out there, so slap on a layer of your favorite deet-based bug spray, and watch your step.

Juicer Boss Room: Your arms are too scrawny. Your legs are too weak. Your core is made of Jell-O, and you've got the resilience of a bowl of porridge. It's time to stop making excuses and put in the effort it takes to transform yourself—to release the beast within.

Reeking of Axe Body Spray and packed with every type of weight room equipment known to humanity (plus some that aren't), the Juicer Boss Room is the ultimate gym. Open 24 hours, you'll lift, you'll gain, and you'll dodge flaming plates (for cardio).

"Today is the day you gain." Steroids not included.

BOROUGH BOSS ROOM—BALL OF SWINE

So you think the World Dungeon "isn't that hard?" Or you're high on your own "OP MC" press? You think you're cruising right through, making all the other crawlers look bad?

Take a little detour into a Borough Boss Room, and then report back. The Ball of Swine's Boss Room is a maze of spiraling corridors surrounding a central rounded courtyard, and once you're in, the only way out is to take down the Boss.

Either you adapt, or you'll die a painful (and embarrassing) death, squashed into crawler-flavored pudding on live TV.

REWARD ROOMS

Every now and then, crawlers are fortunate enough to find a Reward Room, which is almost always as awesome as it sounds. Inside these special rooms, crawlers are offered limited and often timed choices between various reward options including potions, pets, and other items.

Reward Rooms often become available upon the successful completion of a quest or defeating a Boss. But before you select a prize, make sure you take a good hard look at what you're choosing; you never know what might surprise you in the World Dungeon.

QUESTS

FIRST FLOOR QUESTS

Traditionally, we don't give quests until the Third Floor. Most crawlers figure out they need to grind and level up, find a stairwell, and survive—or their game concludes really quickly.

But since you're new here, we've put together a few basic quests on the First and Second Floors so you can stretch your legs, get used to this peculiar new environment, and maybe learn a thing or two along the way. If quests did exist on this floor, they might look something like these:

QUEST—FIND A TUTORIAL GUILD

This one's a no-brainer, but given the sorry state in which some of you entered the dungeon, we figured we'd better Spell it out for you: Find a Tutorial Guild, and then you'll get your Crawler Menu unlocked. As a reward, you'll probably live longer!

QUEST—KILL A MOB

I hate to break it to you, but you're gonna have to kill some bad guys to survive in here. The good news is... they want to kill you, too! My advice: Don't give 'em the chance. Follow the sage wisdom of Cobra Kai: Strike first. Strike hard. No mercy.

And once you do kill something, we'll give you a reward! And you might just get a little bonus if you kill it with your feet...

QUEST—CAST A SPELL

Did you know that approximately 0.001% of all humans to have ever lived on your planet had actual, bonafide magical abilities? Maybe those Puritans back in Salem were on to something after all.

Here in the World Dungeon, once you visit a Tutorial Guild, all crawlers are given access to a limited pool of Mana points plus a starter Spell called "Heal." Cast that or literally any other Spell, and you'll receive a magical reward.

QUEST—USE A WEAPON

Since before mankind even started walking upright, you humans have used your oversized yet underutilized brains to fashion weapons capable of bashing, stabbing, shooting, and killing other living things (including each other).

Here in the dungeon, we applaud that kind of tenacity and ingenuity, so the first time you inflict damage with a weapon—be it makeshift or prefabricated—you'll get a reward.

QUEST—DEFEAT A BOSS

Gamers, eat your heart out—then eat the heart of the first Boss you wipe from the dungeon map. Not only will you receive a reward for finding your first dungeon Boss but you'll also get an even bigger prize (or several) if you manage to kill it. But if you die instead, let's just say that learning the hard way is its own sort of reward.

QUEST—IT'S PARTY TIME!

Classic role-playing games the galaxy-over thrive on the cooperative efforts of players to achieve the grandest heights that basement-dwelling neckbeards can aspire to. Here in the World Dungeon, we encourage the formation of parties! Group up to form an official party, and all party members will receive a special party-themed reward. Those who enter the dungeon together are automatically grouped into a party, but solo crawlers can do this later.

THE SECOND FLOOR

Time to Level Collapse: Six Days

Wait a sec... you made it? You didn't get killed on the First Floor? Honestly, I don't know whether to be impressed or ashamed.

But since you're here, you get to go through one more tutorial level before the real game kicks off. If that sounds awesome to you, or if you're relieved, great! This'll be exactly your speed. If it sounds dull or boring or repetitive... don't worry. We've got a few surprises in store that are guaranteed to keep you guessing and looking over your shoulder.

This is your last chance to rack up Skills and experience and create some unforgettable highlights before you get to Race and Class Selection on the Third Floor, so get to work and show us what you've got.

POPULARITY

Though it may seem like you're only here for yourself, that's actually not true at all. You're here to compete and survive, sure, but you're also here to entertain the entire galaxy. Isn't that cool?

As such, we've created a system in which you can easily track your social media stats starting on the Second Floor. Crawlers track their views, followers, and favorite counts as a single Popularity rating. On later Floors, a high Popularity leads crawlers to land on the leaderboard, attract sponsors, benefactors, or even fan clubs.

Your best bet for longevity in the Crawl is to build your Popularity to critical mass. Be entertaining, push the envelope, run with that insane plan, and you'll rack up views, follows, and favorites—and eventually attract sponsors and benefactors.

A crawler's Popularity won't mean much until the Fourth Floor when the Top Ten List populates and sponsorships become available. To track Popularity, start off each Second Floor crawler with Popularity 0. They might raise their Popularity on interview shows (Campaign Toolkit, p. 72). On the Second Floor, they can increase their Popularity by accomplishing any of the following actions (once per activity):

- Wielding a unique or unconventional weapon
- Achieving a Charisma of 10 or higher
- Enacting an entertaining solution to a problem
- Another interesting, courageous, or crazy event

At the end of the Second Floor, they also lose a point of Popularity for each of the following conditions:

- Consistently used the same big burly weapon for most of the floor
- Their Charisma is 5 or less
- Avoiding difficult fights (this doesn't include Grinding) and are generally boring for over 30 hours

- Entering the stairwell more than 30 hours early
- Grinding for experience for more than 15 of the final 30 hours before descending the stairwell

On the Third Floor, all these efforts to gain Popularity begin to pay off. This is detailed in the Dungeon Crawler Carl Roleplaying Game Core Rulebook.

SPONSORS & BENEFACTORS

Popular crawlers with large followings usually attract support from sponsors and benefactors on later floors. Crawlers occasionally receive Benefactor Boxes from their sponsors later in the dungeon, a benefit which makes sponsorships even more desirable.

In exchange, those viewing the crawler's feed are shown commercials from those sponsors. While this doesn't happen until later floors, there's no better time than now to develop your signature style.

LOCATIONS

INTERVIEWS OUTSIDE THE DUNGEON

Starting on the Second Floor, crawlers may find themselves outside the dungeon as visiting guests on dungeon-centric shows. When traveling outside the dungeon, crawlers don't have access to their inventories and many abilities, so they'd better be on their best behavior.

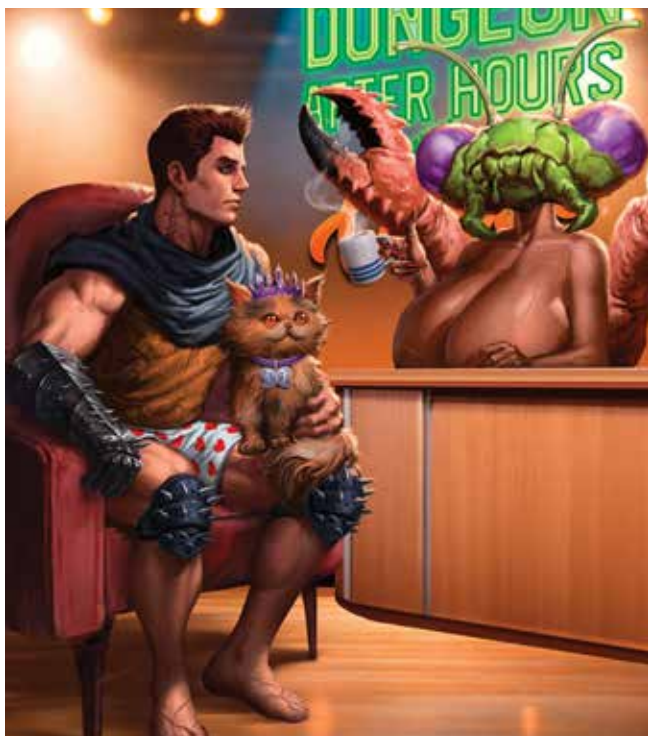

PRODUCTION TRAILERS

If you've made a strong enough impression in the dungeon, you might just land yourself in a production trailer for a dungeon-themed program tunneled live to viewers across the galaxy. These programs are golden opportunities for new crawlers to establish themselves as fan favorites and boost their forthcoming follower counts, all of which kicks off on the Second Floor.

Instead of transporting you to the actual show location, you'll be filmed inside a production trailer that is probably floating on the water on Earth's surface. During your time filming, your menus, HUD, and Skills are disabled, but don't worry—production trailers are completely safe, and so are you.

DUNGEON CRAWLER AFTER HOURS WITH ODETTE

You know her. You love her. Sheeeee's Odette! Former crawler and host of one of the most-watched shows in the galaxy, Odette is known for her sassy, witty takes on everything related to the Crawl. Landing a recurring appearance slot on her program is almost always a guaranteed ticket to superstardom—as long as the dungeon doesn't take you out between appearances.

DEATH WATCH EXTREME DUNGEON MAYHEM

Glurp, glurp! Paint the halls with crawler blood and splash the floor with crawler guts! Hosted by Prince Maestro of the Skull Empire, Death Watch Extreme Dungeon Mayhem is the ultimate collection of the dungeon's most savage slayings and gruesome kills. Occasionally featuring crawler appearances—often to their detriment—this show is the perfect way to ingratiate yourself with a younger, more bloodthirsty crowd.

DUNGEON CRAWLER WORLD: EARTH

For the most up-to-date information and carefully curated recaps of dungeon happenings, no show is better than the official crawl program, Dungeon Crawler World: Earth. The show's long-running host, Kevin, is occasionally joined by pundits and former crawlers Shrak and Jegbarth, who bring insight and experiences from their past crawls. Dungeon Crawler World episodes highlight the wildest matchups and mishaps the dungeon has to offer.

HALLWAYS (SECOND FLOOR)

Cinder block walls accented with orange lichen and white stone floors line the Second Floor dungeon. Sure, it may seem the same like the previous floor, but keep in mind, you're still in the tutorial. It's practice, and some of you humans can barely read a map, let alone use a compass.

Rest assured, you'll find plenty of opportunities to grind your way to higher levels... as long as you don't piss in the hallways and cut the crawl unnecessarily short for you. (Looking at you, Jack in the Cincinnati Bengals hat.)

NEIGHBORHOODS

Just like the First Floor, the hallways take you everywhere you need to go—including new and dangerous Neighborhoods! Here are some examples.

KRAKAREN NEIGHBORHOOD

At the end of every rainbow is a pot of gold. And at the end of every Appalachian Trail is a hoard of creepy Polaroids of Clurichaun family members in compromising situations. Whether you're looking to buy some toilet-grade moonshine or join a pyramid scheme, the Krakaren Neighborhood has got you covered.

Just... don't touch anyone, unless you like contracting easily preventable diseases.

Krakaren Boss Room: The fun part about this Boss room is that what you think is the Boss room isn't always the actual Boss room. On this floor, Bosses can leave their Boss rooms.

Maybe if you hadn't assumed you'd be safe, you could've avoided this whole mess. Instead, you're dealing with a screaming, bus-sized, tentacled nightmare. But if you like biking, blending, and good ol'-fashioned moonshine, you might just squeak through.

KOBOLD NEIGHBORHOOD

If you've got lingering nightmares stemming from the "Yo Quiero Taco Bell" chihuahua commercials of the late '90s (don't we all?), then a violent romp through the Kobold Neighborhood is exactly the catharsis you need.

You'll face down the incredibly smushable Kobolds and their much larger mounts, Danger Dingoes, as you traverse this area, but don't forget to look out for nifty treats in saferooms... including an all-time favorite of crawlers everywhere: Mana Toast.

Kobold Boss Room: I hope you like unintelligible heavy metal that sounds like incessant dog-growling, especially blasted at maximum volume. That's the Kobolds' music of choice for just about every occasion, including subjugation.

Inside their giant dog kennel, the Kobolds keep their Danger Dingoes under lock-and-key, keeping them starved and pissed off so they're more effective in battle. But they're not your concern here—not when there's a certain rage-fueled Frenzied Gerbil afoot! You might want to duck.

QUESTS

SECOND FLOOR QUESTS

Look how far you've come. You've splattered Mobs across the dungeon walls, blown up rooms full of Goblin babies, and insulted an Orc prince to his porcine face on a show that tunnels to most of the known galaxy. I'm almost proud of you. Almost.

If you survive the Second Floor, you'll be ready to take on some real quests, but in the meantime, here are a few more tutorial quests you can pursue to level up and gain new Skills and abilities:

QUEST—DEFYING GRABBITY

Since time immemorial, men in power have been handsy, abusive, and unashamed about any of it. Here in the dungeon, that entitled energy applies to Mobs and Bosses alike.

You'll complete this quest by successfully escaping the lurid grasp of a Mob or Boss. They don't have to physically grab you to complete this quest; they can latch on, squeeze, brush against you a bit too hard, or "just miss" snatching you.

How close is close enough to count? You let me worry about that one. Just stay well out of harm's reach.

QUEST—TRICK A MOB

The statistics are clear: cunning crawlers last longer in the World Dungeon. As fun as the ol' smash-and-grab tactic can be, sometimes a bit of charm, sweet-talking, and deception gets you further.

To complete this quest, trick a Mob into letting you leave a tense situation, give you something of significant value, or betray their own kind. If you're ballsy enough to achieve this on a Boss, your reward will be upgraded accordingly.

QUEST—SOLO-LEVELING

A chain always breaks at its weakest link, and that link might be you, buddy. Imagine the myriad ways you might doom your entire party because you're lagging behind.

Whether you're the strongest in your party, the weakest, or somewhere in between, this is your chance to show off and finally put that overpriced four-year liberal arts degree to use. Complete this quest by killing ten Mobs by yourself, with absolutely no assistance (combat support, healing, or encouragement) from your party members. Bonus points if you solo a Boss Battle and come out alive!

LIFE (OR DEATH) INSIDE THE DUNGEON

The World Dungeon is a magical place full of wonders, rewards, and spleen-devouring insects with mandibles as thick as your thighs.

Surviving the World Dungeon takes skill, strategy, cunning, resolve, and toughness, both mental and physical. That's the bare minimum set of attributes that the average crawler needs to keep moving forward.

Thriving in the dungeon means crawlers have to take their game to the next level, and that requires relentless focus, specialization, mastery, and maximizing every opportunity afforded to you. If you want to rise through the ranks and top the leaderboard charts, you'll have to risk everything.

Greatness always comes with a price. Are you willing to pay it? Or will you make someone else pay it for you?

THE SYSTEM AI

You know that still, small voice inside? The one that guides your path through the darkness, helps you discern right from wrong, and generally has your best interests in mind?

I don't know who or what that is, but it ain't me. As the System AI, I'm here to watch you strive for success or fail miserably, and either way, I'm having a great time—and putting on a great show for trillions of viewers across the galaxy.

While you're fighting for your lives, I'm doin' my thang in the background, running the game, creating new Mobs and Bosses, and otherwise executing the showrunners' plans for the Crawl—with a hefty dose of "artistic license" and "creative leeway."

Wherever you go, I'll be there. As the old saying goes, "You can run, but you can't hide." (And to be honest, running isn't a long-term solution anyway. Stand your ground and fight, pussies!)

ACHIEVEMENTS & LOOT BOXES

Crawlers get stuff in the dungeon. Viewers love it.

ACHIEVEMENTS AND REWARDS

New Achievement! Of all the things I can (and will) say to you throughout your incredibly brief time here in the World Dungeon, this is probably the only one worth looking forward to.

Achievements are bestowed upon crawlers when they do something. No, it doesn't have to be particularly noteworthy or impressive, though that certainly helps. Sometimes you'll get achievements for being stupid, or accidentally accomplishing something, or sometimes you'll get achievements when something happens to you. It could be anything, really.

Tied to each achievement is a reward. Sometimes it's something tangible, like a loot box. Other times, it's a witty one-liner or an "attaboy." No matter the reward, you should be grateful, you entitled little prick.

Here are some basic types of achievements:

ENTRY ACHIEVEMENTS

"Legendary right when he walks in."

—Mordecai

Entry Achievements give certain crawlers a boost early in the game. When crawlers enter the dungeon under special or unique circumstances, they receive achievements and rewards that can prove instrumental, even altering the trajectory of their time in the dungeon.

TUTORIAL ACHIEVEMENTS

During the first two floors, Tutorial Achievements are plentiful and generous. By design, crawlers get flooded with all sorts of gear and loot and resources thanks to these “starter” achievements, which offer countless opportunities to shape their Skills, abilities, and gameplay early on.

Crawlers with adroit Game Guides who provide thoughtful direction can better prepare for Race and Class Selection on the Third Floor. Any tangible rewards that aren’t used can be sold or kept in the crawler’s Inventory.

LOOT BOXES

If the World Dungeon is a mouth, and the crawlers are the food, then loot boxes are the seasoning that elevates the meal from TV dinners to Michelin-starred cuisine. They’re rewards from the System AI for earning achievements, completing quests, and defeating Bosses. Loot boxes aren’t a physical thing; you can think of them like a digital reward or DLC. They’re delivered directly to the lucky crawler’s Inventory. You won’t find them lying around the dungeon; you only get them as rewards and gifts.

Featuring an unlimited range of loot box types and variations, crawlers can expect to find something useful in each box—with the application of varying degrees of resourcefulness. Loot boxes come in a standardized set of tiers to denote the relative value of their contents as well as their rarity, from lowest and most common Bronze to rarest Celestial.

Each tier of loot box can be modified based on a variety of factors, most often based on your actions within the World Dungeon, but occasionally with input from a certain System AI. Though the dungeon only offers six tiers of loot boxes, the potential variations are essentially limitless. Some of them include:

ADVENTURER BOXES

Adventurer Boxes are sort of the dungeon’s catch-all for low-level loot, though on lower floors, the loot starts to improve. Need some cheap armor? Some rope? Some basic potions? A mediocre weapon? Craving some crawler biscuits? Open the slew of Adventurer Boxes we just sent you and get busy.

BRONZE (COMMON)

SILVER

GOLD

PLATINUM

LEGENDARY

CELESTIAL (RAREST)

ASSASSIN'S BOXES

If your gameplay is centered around murdering NPCs, but doing it smoothly and with finesse, then at some point you'll be awarded an Assassin's Box. Inside, you'll find items and abilities to help you become the ultimate assassin.

ASSHOLE BOXES

Look in the mirror. If you can sleep soundly despite the terrible decisions you're making here in the World Dungeon, you're probably gonna get a lot of these.

Asshole Boxes are awarded to crawlers who do asshole-ish things, and they include the kinds of prizes an asshole deserves.

BOSS BOXES

Kill a Boss, get rewarded. It really is that simple. Boss Boxes can yield some pretty awesome loot, especially the higher the Boss's tier. Boss Boxes tend to give way better rewards than other boxes of that same type, but they're much more difficult to earn.

- Neighborhood Boss—Bronze Boss Box
- Borough Boss—Silver Boss Box
- City Boss—Gold Boss Box
- Province Boss—Platinum Boss Box
- Country Boss—Legendary Boss Box
- Floor Boss—Celestial Boss Box

GOBLIN BOXES

We like a good theme, and we like when it's applied consistently. Goblins love explosives, so when you use explosives in an impressive way, we like to give you more explosives. In other words, keep blowing shit up, and we'll keep giving you tools to blow shit up.

LOOTER BOXES

For the kleptomaniacs and shopaholics, Looter Boxes reward your materialistic tendencies for Inventory- and looting-based actions. The more you grab, the more cool stuff we'll give you, so pilfer away.

LUCKY BASTARD BOXES

By now, you know that luck is a real thing. Whenever you pull off the seemingly impossible, through little-to-no consequential action on your part, we call it luck, and we reward you for it via a Lucky Bastard Box. Common prizes include gambling chips and scratch-off tickets, all with different properties.

LUCKY BITCH BOXES

Lucky Bitch Boxes are almost identical to Lucky Bastard Boxes, but with one key difference: You'll get awarded a Lucky Bitch Box if you rely on game mechanics, the AI, or any other force completely out of your control while you're being actively punished in the dungeon. In other words, if you're a little bitch, you'll get rewarded like one.

MECHANIC'S BOXES

Who says you have to give up your hobbies just because it's the apocalypse? And who says you can't travel in style just because all your world's vehicles have been destroyed, repurposed, and no longer resemble anything recognizable?

Create (or modify) your own means of transportation, and you'll probably receive a Mechanic's Box. These boxes contain crafting tools and parts to help you pimp-yo-ride.

PET BOXES

If you're crazy enough to bring a poor defenseless creature into the World Dungeon with you just because you can't bear to live without it, then either you're a loving pet owner or you're an abysmal parent. Pet Boxes are awarded to crawlers for pet-themed achievements (duh), and they contain pet-themed prizes, including pet biscuits, scrolls of Heal Critter, and more.

QUEST BOXES

Complete a quest, win a loot box. Quest Boxes are awarded based on the difficulty of the quest and how you managed to complete it.

That's it. Nothing more. Fuck you.

SAVAGE BOXES

The aliens took over your planet, and your first inclination was to go full murder-hobo on your fellow humans? You're a savage! And when you kill another crawler for the first time, you get a Savage Box that contains all sorts of nefarious tools designed to help you get better at finding and killing even more crawlers.

SURVIVOR'S BOXES

Sometimes battles come down to the last second, and crawlers barely make it through. When this happens, we award them a Survivor's Box, which usually includes supplies to help them get through the next battle a little more easily, including semi-random Health-related loot.

LOOT

When you get a loot box, it'll be full of all kinds of useful items. Maybe not useful to you, but our many merchants will be happy to take it off your hands so you can spend that gold on something you do want. Or trade it to a party member and see what the AI thinks of that.

Of course, a box isn't the only way to get sweet gear. You're gonna kill a lot of monsters or die trying, and almost every bastard you take out has something on them. Once they're dead, you can loot them and pull all their shit into your Inventory. It's like a box of chocolates—you never know what you're gonna get. The most common stuff you'll find is Misc. Junk.

LOOTING MOBS

First Floor Mobs drop no gold, but Second Floor ones do, typically in the 1d6 range each. Their armor, weapons, and other items are of such terrible quality that they probably count as Misc. Junk.

LOOTING BOSSES

I lied—you always know one thing you're gonna get from a Boss: a map. The map's quality depends on the Boss, and no matter what type of map it is, it's bound to help you get around the area easier.

NEIGHBORHOOD MAP

Acquired by defeating a Neighborhood Boss. This adds a map of the Boss's Neighborhood to a crawler's minimap, as well as all Mobs within that Neighborhood. Mobs appear as simple colored dots, but the Neighborhood Map does not provide further details.

Neighborhood Maps make Grinding more efficient. Because you can avoid lulls in the action, if you Grind for 5 or more hours, add 1 hour to your Grinding time. This allows you to Grind for 5 hours (the typical limit per day) and receive credit for 6 (See Grinding, in Crawlers & Customization, p. 43).

BOROUGH FIELD GUIDE

Acquired by defeating a Borough Boss. It will add an outline to individual quadrants within a borough, although details such as hallways or rooms will remain obscured. Focusing on a specific area will trigger a tooltip box to open, revealing the Mob level range and type (For example: Mobs Level 2–5. Shambling Acid Impaler.). The Borough Field Guide does not fill in Neighborhood details like a Neighborhood Map.

Borough Field Guides make Grinding way more efficient because you can avoid lulls in the action. If you Grind for 5 or more hours, add 2 hours to your Grinding time. This allows you to Grind for 5 hours (the typical limit per day) and receive credit for 7 (see Grinding, in Crawlers & Customization, p. 43).

GOLD

Gold is the currency of the realm, tracked as part of the crawler Inventory system, so there's no need to worry about some dirty ragamuffin stealing your pouch when you visit a settlement. All merchants in the dungeon take gold, from everyday saferoom Bopcas to exclusive vendors, and you're bound to get plenty in your loot boxes.

Mobs begin to drop gold on the Second Floor, and you can claim it if you're willing to rifle through their icky pockets. All your gold fits into a single Inventory slot.

MUNDANE ITEMS

Loot boxes contain a lot of mundane items, with crawler biscuits and torches among the most common to keep crawlers fed and from falling on their faces in the dark.

GEAR

Gear, such as armor and weapons, is also common in loot boxes. Higher rarity loot boxes carry magical gear that gives crawlers new ways to handle the dungeon's challenges. On the Tutorial Floors, gear is one of the few ways for crawlers to improve their Stats, since they can't apply any Stat points from leveling up until the Third Floor.

CONSUMABLES

Loot boxes are also a great place to source useful consumables like potions, scrolls, and explosives. Keep in mind that consumables may need to be on your Hotlist to be immediately useful.

RARE MATERIALS

Crafters can find all manner of rare materials for construction projects in loot boxes as well. For those who don't like getting their hands dirty, these materials can sell for a lot of gold.

COUPONS & FURNITURE

If you live long enough to make it past the first few floors, you might be able to afford a personal space that you can access from saferooms. Furniture and specialized equipment, like crafting tables, goes there. Coupons can be exchanged with Bopcas to expand the types of rooms in your personal space, taking you from a coffin-sized apartment to the grand middle-class homes of every unemployed '90s sitcom character.

SAMPLE LOOT

So that loot box is staring at you from your Inventory. But what's inside? That's up to the Game Master, but when you open it up in a saferoom, here are some goodies you might encounter:

BRONZE BOXES

Mostly weak magical items and mundane adventuring items, such as:

- Healing Potion (Heals 5 Health Bar slots)
- Mana Potion (Full restore)
- A Random Piece of Armor with +1 Damage Resistance
- Spell Scroll (One shot, no Mana casting; weak Spell)
- Magic Tome (Learn a new, weak Spell)
- 1d6 Bandages (spend an Action to remove the Blood Trail Debuff)
- Rope (50 feet)
- Torches ×10 (Provides bright light for 20 feet and dim light for another 20 feet. It burns out in about an hour.)
- Stick of Basic Dynamite (1d6 Bludgeoning damage, 0ft Blast radius +5ft Splash)
- And almost always 1d10 Gold

SILVER BOXES

Magical items begin to appear with more frequency in silver boxes, as well as more potent consumables.

- Silver Ring of +2 to a Stat (Accessory Slot)
- Potion of +1 Skill Rank (Permanent)
- Spell Scrolls (One shot, no Mana casting)
- Spellbooks (Learn a new Spell)
- Magic Paper (for Scroll-writing)
- Poison Antidotes (2)
- Crawler Biscuits (100)
- Good Healing Potion (Heals 6 Health Bar slots)
- Heal Pet Potion (Heals 5 Health Bar slots)
- Stick of Good Goblin Dynamite (2d6 Bludgeoning damage, 5ft Blast radius +5ft Splash)
- And almost always 1d10 × 100 Gold

SAMPLE MAGICAL GEAR FROM SILVER LOOT BOXES

THE INTRUDER

Gear Slot: Hands/Holding

Once per turn while holding this baton, you may enter occupied spaces during combat. The current occupant (friend or foe) is pushed out of the way five feet in a direction of your choosing.

HAT COUTURE

Gear Slot: Head

+1 Damage Resistance (Head)

+2 Charisma Stat

THE HELPING HANDWRAPS

Gear Slot: Hands/Holding

+1 Damage Resistance (Hands)

You roll 1d8 instead of 1d6 when you perform the Intervene Action in combat.

GOLD BOXES

Gold boxes are where the loot starts getting good and contain items like:

- Golden Ring of +3 to a Stat (Accessory Slot)
- Potion of +2 Skill Rank (Permanent)
- Spellbooks (Learn a new Spell)
- Spell Scrolls (One shot, no Mana casting)
- Magic Paper (for Scroll-writing)
- Crafting, Sapper, Engineer, Alchemy, or Metal Working Table
- Gold Standard Healing Potion (Heals 7 Health Bar slots and mends one Minor Injury)
- Scroll of Upgrade (upgrades a crawler's signature weapon)
- And almost always 1d6 × 1000 Gold

SAMPLE MAGICAL GEAR FROM GOLD LOOT BOXES

ENCHANTED CODPIECE OF THE OVERCOMPENSATING KOBOLD

Gear Slot: Accessory

+4 to Charisma Stat

Immunity to seduction attempts

ENCHANTED EXIT STRATEGY CLOAK

Gear Slot: Accessory

+5 Running Skill Ranks

When there are fewer than 30 hours before floor collapse, your Move is increased by 10.

ENCHANTED MANTLE OF THE ASH CULT

Gear Slot: Accessory

Your Critical Hits deal ×4 damage. If the blow kills the Mob, they turn to ash, and you can't loot their corpse.

PLATINUM BOXES

Platinum boxes are worth getting excited about. They can change your whole experience in the dungeon with options like significantly upgrading gear, granting new permanent Spells, and other benefits that asshole crawlers will be keen to kill you for.

- An interesting item granting +4 to a Stat
- Potion of +3 Skill Rank (Permanent)
- Supreme Healing Potion (Heals 8 Health Bar slots and mends one Minor or Major Injury; or deal 8d8 Holy damage to an undead Mob)
- Scratcher tickets
- Various Crafting Tables
- Various Crafting Table Upgrade Coupons
- Personal Space Coupons
- Good Mana Refill Potion (Restores 15 Mana per round for 10 rounds)
- Spellbooks (Learn a new Spell)
- Spell Scrolls (One shot, no Mana casting)
- Scroll of Upgrade (upgrades a crawler's signature weapon)
- And almost always 2d6 × 1000 Gold

SAMPLE MAGICAL GEAR FROM PLATINUM LOOT BOXES

ENCHANTED GOGGLES OF THE CRIMSON SPIDERLORD

Gear Slot: Accessory

+3 Intelligence Stat

+2 Climbing Skill Ranks

You can see in every direction, but lose your balance and can't make out fine details. All terrain is considered difficult terrain. You suffer Disadvantage on all attempts to read and pick out fine details.

ENCHANTED BOOTS OF THE WIRE STALKERS

Gear Slot: Feet

+4 Dexterity Stat

+3 Jumping Skill Ranks

You can perform Move Actions across rope, wire, clothes lines, and similar surfaces.

ENCHANTED CLOAK OF THE RIFT LEECHES

Gear Slot: Accessory

Immunity to poison.

While you are in skin-to-skin contact with a foe, as an Action, you cause them to lose 1 Health Bar slot and you heal 1 Health Bar slot.

LEGENDARY BOXES

Legendary boxes are just that: boxes so rare and with rewards so good that they're talked about in whispers. And yeah, sure, kid—your uncle's roommate's jazzercise instructor totally won one from Bigfoot.

- An interesting item granting +10% to a Stat
- Potion of +5 Skill Rank (Permanent)
- Rare Spellbook (Learn a new Spell)
- Rare Spell Scroll (One shot, no Mana casting)
- Various Crafting Tables
- Various Crafting Table Upgrade Coupons
- Heal Severe Injury Potion (Heals 9 Health Bar slots and mends all Injuries)
- And almost always 1d10 × 10,000 Gold

SAMPLE MAGICAL GEAR FROM LEGENDARY LOOT BOXES

ENCHANTED BELT OF THE BLOOD FARMERS

Gear Slot: Accessory

+10% Constitution Stat

When you kill a Mob of a higher level, choose a party member to heal 1d2+1d4 Health Bar slots.

ENCHANTED SPECK OF MANY THINGS

Gear Slot: Accessory

+6 Perception Skill Ranks

Once per scene, create a mundane speck that is no larger than a sugar cube but can weigh up to three ounces. It can appear anywhere in your line of sight, but once created, you have no control over it. If created midair, it will fall (inaccurately).

NAMETAG OF THE ALL-BUSINESS BUGABOO

Gear Slot: Accessory

It's like you're an employee at one of those fancy international hotels where the city and country you're from is right there under your name for all to see.

+10% Strength Stat

+4 Regeneration Skill Ranks

+5 Ambush Skill Ranks

Resistance to any Area damage (Burst, Blasts, etc.)

CELESTIAL BOXES

You thought legendary boxes were great? This blows that shit out of the water.

- Divine Items—Things that do weird stuff when in the presence of deities.
- Overpowered weapons, armor, and gear
- Potions that Max Out Skills (Permanent)
- Items that Rewrite Stats
- Life-Altering Effects on Items
- Sorry, no Gold

SAMPLE GEAR FROM CELESTIAL LOOT BOXES

HALO OF TEMPORARY PERMISSION

Gear Slot: Head

Choose a Skill and max it out to Rank 15.

Each time you assign a level-up Stat point to your Charisma, it increases by 2 points instead.

The first time per floor that you break a rule as an Acolyte (or higher) of a deity, your deity cannot smite you. They may be able to express their displeasure in other ways. Break a second rule, and you can be doubly smitten... smoten..? Whatever. You understand.

THE LEDGER OF MINOR SINS

Gear Slot: Accessory

Immune to non-Spell damage from crawlers outside your party.

At the start of each day, name any crawler. Whatever they do that day will be recorded in your ledger with about a one-minute delay: fighting, walking, talking, scratching their butt, and more. Vague impressions of who or what is around them are included.

MASK OF THE UNANSWERED PRAYER

Gear Slot: Accessory

+3 Damage Resistance (Head)

Resistant to damage from other deities (not yours, mind you, in case you need a good smiting).

When you spend an AI Favor in the presence of your deity or after a 2-hour prayer session during a short rest, you may cast a non-combat Spell at no Mana cost.

RANDOMIZED MAGIC ITEMS

Finding new and interesting gear inside loot boxes and treasure chests is a favorite pastime of dungeon crawlers. Magical gear items typically offer a number of different benefits based on the tier of the loot box they came from. Roll a number of times, based on rarity, on the table for a given piece of Enchanted gear (Table 3, 4, or 5).

- Bronze: No rolls, item is mundane
- Silver: One roll
- Gold: Two rolls
- Platinum: Three rolls
- Legendary: Four rolls
- Celestial: Five rolls

The randomized magic items can either be rolled—with a d6—or selected by GMs who want to have the items ready when the loot box opens. The items can also be rolled up when the player opens the loot box as a surprise for everyone. In some cases, you may need to reroll duplicates, and in others, it makes sense for multiples of an option, like a Stat or Skill bonus, to apply to different Stats or Skills. The GM can also roll or simply choose something ahead of time, keeping a list of what the crawlers will eventually find.

If you roll an X value (such as +X Stat) on one of these tables, the value is determined by the loot box rarity (See X Values, p. 27). If you get a “Something Unique” in your roll(s), stop rolling on the current table and move to Something Unique.

TABLE 2: ITEM TYPE

ROLL OR CHOOSE	TYPE
1–2	Enchanted Mundane Item or Weapon: Choose the type of weapon or item the PCs would use or what viewers would find funny
3–4	Enchanted Clothing: Choose the type of clothing based on what the PCs wear or what viewers would find funny
5–6	Enchanted Accessory: Choose the type of accessory based on what the PCs might wear or what viewers would find funny

TABLE 3: ENCHANTED MUNDANE ITEM OR WEAPON

ROLL OR CHOOSE	RESULT
1	+X Stat Bonus
2	+X Skill Bonus
3	A Buff (not Skill or Stat bonuses)
4	A Passive Skill at Rank equal to the Floor
5	Inherent Spell* (no Mana cost; with Cooldown based on power level—GM’s choice)
6	Roll on Table 6: Something Unique

TABLE 4: ENCHANTED CLOTHING

ROLL OR CHOOSE	RESULT
1	+X Stat Bonus
2	+X Skill Bonus
3	A Buff (not Skill or Stat bonuses)
4	Resistance to Acid, Electric, Fire, Ice, or Poison damage
5	+1 Damage Resistance
6	Roll on Table 6: Something Unique

TABLE 5: ENCHANTED ACCESSORY (JEWEL, BELT, PATCH, TATTOO, ETC.)

ROLL OR CHOOSE	RESULT
1	+X Stat Bonus
2	+X Skill Bonus
3	A Buff (not Skill or Stat bonuses)
4	External Buff of either Recovery (full Health) or Restore (full Mana) once per Floor
5	Inherent Spell* (no Mana cost; with Cooldown based on power level—GM's choice)
6	Roll on Table 6: Something Unique

When you gain an item with an inherent Spell, it has a fixed Rank. The Rank of the Spell typically follows the same values as seen below for Skill Ranks, though exceptions are common, like Carl's "Protective Shell" was Rank 15 when he first got it. Spells gained this way don't cost Mana to cast, but have added cooldowns—usually 2 hours per Spell Rank.*

X VALUES

The actual value of the Xs in the tables 3, 4, and 5 is dependent on what floor it is, how much the AI likes the crawler, and/or the GM's discretion. Not every magical item grants a crawler additional Ranks in a Skill they already have. If a crawler gains Ranks in a Skill they do not currently have Ranks in, they now have that Skill at the Rank noted.

Here are some guidelines for the Tutorial Floors:

- Silver: +1 Skill Rank or +2 Stat
- Gold: +1–3 Skill Rank or +3–5 Stat
- Platinum: +2–4 Skill Rank or +5% Stat
- Legendary: +5 Skill Rank or +10% Stat
- Celestial: +6 Skill Rank or +20% Stat

When you get an item with a percentage boost to a Stat, the determined value of the percentage is set at the time you get the item. As with all other rounding, round down. After determining the value, record it on your character sheet (not the percentage).

SOMETHING UNIQUE

Stop rolling when you roll "Something Unique" on any of the above tables. The "Unique" result should be extra powerful for each roll you missed out on by rolling Something Unique. Roll 1d6 (just once) on Table 6 (below) to see what your unique thing does.

Example: You roll a Something Unique result on your first of three rolls for an item from a platinum loot box. That unique thing should be around three times more powerful than if it had been rolled last.

TABLE 6: SOMETHING UNIQUE

ROLL OR CHOOSE	RESULT
1	GM's choice
2	Interacts with a god
3	The thing is intelligent
4	Summon minions to fight for you
5	Mimics something from the encounter where the loot box was earned
6	Player's choice (with GM approval)

NAMING ITEMS

Name the item after rolling it up. If you roll Something Unique, the name of the item is sometimes influenced by that ability. Items of gold, platinum, and legendary loot box origins will usually be preceded by "Enchanted."

Magical items and gear typically have crazy names that tell you little of what the thing actually does. The naming conventions tend to use "The TYPE OF THING of the ADJECTIVE CREATOR/MOB/DEITY/BOSS." Common items often drop "The" in favor of the item name, like "Mask of the Psychotic Bugaboo."

NOTABLE CRAWLERS

It's possible to go largely unnoticed in the World Dungeon, but not forever. Circumstances within the Crawl, including the actions of other crawlers, have a way of drawing even the most cloistered loners out in the open.

The crawlers on this list have made enough of an impact on this season's Crawl to be remembered, if only for a little while—or in some cases, much, much longer.

CARL

*"You will not break me. Fuck you all.
I will break you."*

—Carl

If not for pure chance, Carl never would've entered the World Dungeon. Though his ex-girlfriend cheated on him and her cat, Princess Donut, escaped into the wintry night, Carl is a man of duty, so he went after the cat.

Clad in only his heart-print boxers and an old leather jacket, he slipped on his ex's too-small pink Crocs and followed Donut into the cold that night. The rest, as you might say, is history.

In the World Dungeon, Carl has made quite the name for himself. He has proven capable of dealing with virtually any threat that comes his way, whether in-dungeon or otherwise. Perhaps most importantly, he serves as a beacon of hope and a rallying point for other crawlers.

PRINCESS DONUT

"Viva la revolution, Carl."

—Princess Donut

GC, BWR, NW Princess Donut the Queen Anne Chonk lived most of her life as a show-quality Persian cat. The winner of multiple best-in-show championships, she was headed toward retirement when the World Dungeon opened and the Crawl began.

The epitome of pampered royalty, Donut is particular and expects to be treated as such. She despises dogs and loves the color purple. She is absolutely loyal to her Royal Bodyguard, Carl, and is quick to defend and support her friends. Her impulsiveness often creates complications for those around her, but it usually all works out in the end.

KATIA

A former art professor at a university in Reykjavik, Iceland, Katia Grimm entered the dungeon under duress. Shortly after, she and her friend Eva joined Brynhild's Daughters, a party founded by the formidable crawler Hekla.

Timid, shy, and falling behind in her development, she eventually joins Carl and Donut's party with the hope of "catching up." Throughout the course of the Crawl, she develops confidence and determination, eventually earning her a spot among the top crawlers.

DANIEL BAUTISTA

Prior to the Crawl, Daniel Bautista and his family ran a tea shop in the Philippines. When he entered the World Dungeon, his family perished early on the Third Floor, leaving him alone.

Reliable and loyal, Bautista partners with Carl and Donut multiple times within the World Dungeon, as their interests often align perfectly. He proves resourceful and capable many times over and often serves as a crucial connection point between Carl and other crawlers when it matters most.

BRANDON ANDREWS

As part of the maintenance staff at the Meadow Lark Elder Care Facility, Brandon Andrews and his brother Chris help to evacuate the home's residents during a fire alarm just before the Crawl kicks off. With elderly residents shivering in the bitter winter cold, he and the other facility staff escort their patients into the warmth of the stairwell.

Kind, generous, and determined to shepherd the people under his care, Brandon routinely acts against his own interests to keep the Meadow Lark residents safe.

CHRIS ANDREWS

Brother to Brandon Andrews and fellow maintenance staff at the Meadow Lark Elder Care Facility, Chris is a man of few words. His story mirrors Brandon's up to a point, but their paths diverge after an argument.

Because of his quiet demeanor and his choice to separate from team Meadow Lark in the World Dungeon, he is regarded as mysterious and enigmatic, with his true intentions unknown.

IMANI

A caregiver driven by her sense of duty to her patients, Imani led the residents of Meadow Lark into the stairwell to protect them. Inside the dungeon, her relentless protection continues.

She is one of Carl and Donut's most loyal and longstanding allies, and she cooperates and works together with them multiple times. Despite heavy personal losses of her fellow workers and the Meadow Lark residents, she persists, focused on helping others as the healer she was always meant to be.

YOLANDA MARTINEZ

"When the apocalypse came for Yolanda, she didn't once waver in her dedication to her patients. She was quick to laugh, quick to smile. And even though Yolanda Martinez was just as terrified as the rest of us, she stood her ground against a force she couldn't possibly hold back."

—Carl

Also a caregiver at Meadow Lark, Yolanda joined her fellow staff and residents in their descent into the World Dungeon. Known for her friendly demeanor and personality, she is a beacon of light for those around her, even despite the harsh conditions of the Crawl.

ELLE MCGIBBONS

"Whose dick do I gotta suck to get another drink?"
—Elle McGibbons

A resident of Meadow Lark, Elle McGibbons is a firecracker with a whiplash tongue. Even before she made it to the Third Floor, she routinely said whatever sprang to mind, unhindered by any sense of decorum or any awareness of her surroundings. Following her transformation upon selecting a new race and class on the Third Floor, it only got more pronounced.

Hard-drinking, fiercely loyal, and no-nonsense, Elle McGibbons routinely partners with Carl and Donut in their escapades throughout the dungeon.

JACK

When human males reach a certain age, they become careless, entitled, selfish, thoughtless, and perverse. Some men reach this age sooner than others, but dear old Jack, a former resident of Meadow Lark, lived virtually his entire life that way.

Toss in old age and a hefty dose of Alzheimer's, and Jack became far more of a liability than an asset in the World Dungeon. Whether unable or unwilling to follow simple instructions (like don't piss on the walls in the dungeon hallways), Jack always chose to do things his way, consequences be damned (literally).

